STATE FAILS TO PROVE EATON POISON SALE

NO PROOF WIDOW PURCHASED DRUG

State Detective John H. Scott, on the stand facing Mrs. Jennie May Eaton at Plymouth today, admitted that the State's great poison hunt in the case had been a total failure. This was the sensation of today's testimony.

Detective Scott declared that though he had searched thoroughly in Greater Boston and other places he had been unable to find "that Mrs. Eaton had obtained poison."

FAILURE IN EVERY SEARCH FOR POISON.

The State detective declared the poison hunt had led him as far as Georgetown, D. C., and Alexandria, Va., Mrs. Eaton's birthplace. He said he had searched [illegible] names besides that of Mrs. Eaton [illegible] the names of Ainsworth, Keyes and Wallingford. He said the result was the same everywhere—failure.

These admissions, brought out under cross-examination by Attorney Morse for the accused widow, followed the first testimony in the trial drama of Mrs. Eaton's story of the illness and death of her husband, Rear Admiral Eaton. This story was dramatic to the last degree. This story also came from the lips of State Detective Scott.

Detective Scott said the accused widow had told him the admiral [illegible] on his deathbed and a few hours before the end [illegible] had entreated her with this plea:

"Oh, send for a doctor. Oh, I am so sick."

The State detective testified further that Mrs. Eaton told him she had sent for a physician after she had awakened and found the admiral dead, his arm clasped about her shoulder and her arm embracing him.

Detective Scott said Mrs. Eaton had declared:

"Nobody gave him (the admiral) anything but myself. Dorothy did not give him anything, nor did my mother."

The mysterious typewritten will which was mentioned in the testimony last week again figured in the trial today. Detective Scott declared this one was Mrs. Eaton's will bequeathing all her property to her daughter June." Chief Justice Aiken almost immediately ordered this statement of Scott's stricken out.

Scott said Mrs. Eaton told him the admiral was the kind of a man that would come to her with a necklace in one hand and poison in the other." Scott said the widow accused her husband of being addicted to liquor, opium and morphine and of smoking opium in a pipe. Mrs. Eaton had said to him when he [illegible] that he was beginning an inquiry into her husband's death:

"I don't see the need of anything of this kind. The doctors have already said that the admiral died a natural death."

Excited at Funeral.

Scott testified that on the day before the admiral's funeral, Mrs. Eaton became so excited that she almost pushed the casket containing the admiral's body over twice.

Scott said Mrs. Eaton told him she had searched the admiral's death bed for traces of poison, but in vain, and that she wanted to hire some "Sherlock Holmes or a paid detective." She

Striking Points in Eaton Trial Testimony Today

Admission by State Detective Scott that country-wide search had failed to find any poison purchases by Mrs. Eaton.

State by Scott, quoting Mrs. Eaton, that she had been the only one in attendance on the admiral on the day of death and the day previous. "Nobody gave him anything but myself. Dorothy did not give him anything, nor did my mother," Scott testified Mrs. Eaton told him.

JEROME ACTS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Twenty witnesses were subpoenaed today to appear before the New York County Grand Jury, which tomorrow will take up the investigation of Harry Thaw's escape from Matteawan.

The subpoenas were served by Detective Langdon and other men from the office of District Attorney Whitman. But Mr. Whitman will allow William Travers Jerome to conduct the case.

Jerome said today:

I have proof that the plot which resulted in Thaw's release was hatched in a West Side saloon. I will ask a true bill against Thaw and others.

It is expected that about ten additional witnesses will be called. Besides Thaw, it is believed that indictments will be sought against Richard J. Butler, former assemblyman, and others. Mr. Jerome will represent Attorney General Carmody in the investigation.

Some of the Witnesses.

Among the witnesses subpoenaed by Detective Langdon were Howard H. Barnum, the attendant who is under bonds in Dutchess County, charged with aiding Thaw's escape from Matteawan; William Gordon, proprietor of the Holland Hotel; James Hickey, the milkman who drove in the wagon at the time Thaw rushed out through the gate; Mrs. James Maher, the laundress at the hospital, who saw the automobile waiting outside the gate for Thaw, and Dr. Kieb, medical superintendent of the hospital.

Thaw's escape from Matteawan was sensational, because it was so simple. Sunday morning, August 17, he got up, dressed as usual, and strolled out into the yard of the asylum. About that time the milkman arrived on his regular rounds. Barnum, an official of the asylum, opened the gate to admit the milkman.

Speeds Away in Auto.

Thaw slipped out on the opposite side of the wagon from Barnum, as the wagon entered. A big, black automobile had slipped quietly up the hill and was waiting, its engines humming. Thaw

BEILIS CASE IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Senator Lewis of Illinois today introduced in the Senate a resolution calling upon the government of Russia to withdraw the unjust ritual murder charge against the Jewish people at large and Mendel Beilis, on trial in Russia for the murder of a Christian boy. The resolution reads:

"Whereas the government of the Empire of Russia is now engaged in the persecution of the Jewish laborer, Mendel Beilis, upon an unfounded and groundless charge of having murdered a Christian boy for the purpose of using Christian blood for religious purposes;

Whereas, there is absolutely nothing in the Jewish religion, doctrines or ethics requiring such a practice, but that on the contrary, the use of blood in any manner is prohibited by the Old Testament, Leviticus, Ten;

Whereas the constant and relentless persecution of Jews in Russia brings to our shores thousands of Russian Jewish refugees who have been taken care of and the United States therefore has a direct interest in the matter;

Whereas the Beilis trial is calculated to incite ignorant people to commit outrages against Jewish people and as a result of such fear the Jewish immigration to the United States has already increased.

Therefore, Be it resolved by the Senate of the United States that the United States of America look with disfavor upon the Beilis case, and that the government of the United States use its good offices with the government of Russia to the end that the impossible ritual murder charge against the Jewish people at large and Mendel Beilis in particular, be withdrawn.

BOSTON TO GET NEW OCEAN LINE

Following the visit of Sir Stephen Furness, head of the Furness, Withy & Company shipping concern, the Boston office of the company announced today that the combination of the Swedish-Americo-Mexico and the Norway-Mexico-Gulf Lines would shortly establish a passenger and freight service between Boston, Christiania and Gothenburg.

The Noruega and the Texas will begin the service, and if it proves profitable other ships will be added. These two vessels were built about four years ago and have cabin passenger accommodations for about one hundred persons. They are medium-sized ships of about 4,000 tons burden.

The Texas and Noruega will sail from Gothenburg and Christiania for Boston, and on the return trip will take passengers and cargo at Newport News and Philadelphia.

Europe in Glee Over Tariff, Says Schwab

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—European merchants are jubilant over the new American tariff bill and now are making plans for an invasion of the United States with their goods, according to Charles M. Schwab, president of the Bethlehem Steel Company, who returned from Europe today on the Olympic.

"Everywhere throughout Europe," said Mr. Schwab, "the merchants are preparing to ship heavy consignments of their products to America. It will take some little time before the invasion is well under way but it will surely come."

Walsh Odds 10 to 8 on Stock Exchange

Many Bets at Even Money Bird Gets More Votes Than Gardner.

Election bets took a boom on the Stock Exchange today. A considerable batch of money was placed. Walsh led the field, at odds of ten to eight that he would win. There was a good deal of money on both sides of the even money proposition that Bird would get more votes than Gardner.

One of the freak bets of the day—which was reported but not confirmed—was an offer of $1,000 to $500 that Gardner gets two votes for every one cast for Foss. Governor Foss' supporters say such an offer is silly and doubt that any such bet was ever made.

Hungry Cat Warns of Woman's Death

Janitor George MacKerron of the apartments at No. 534 Columbus avenue, has seen a cat belonging to Josephine Marrion of suite 6 mewing on the window outside her rooms for two days. Today, he entered the suite with his latch key, and found the woman—who is thirty-five and single, dead on the floor.

He let the cat into the room, then telephoned the police, and Medical Examiner Leary was notified.

Seek 4 Robbers in Watertown Shooting

The police are searching for four men who attempted to break into the Arzine Grocery Company's store in Mt. Auburn street, Watertown, and escaped after firing three shots at Leo Stephenson and Gaspar Arinian, the proprietors, during a chase.

FOSS TO PROBE INSANE ASYLUM

Governor Foss today declared that there will be a thorough investigation of every insane hospital in the State, as a result of the charges of cruelty at the Worcester Hospital. After a conference with Dr. L. Vernon Briggs of the State Board of Insanity, he said:

There will be a general and thorough investigation of the insane institutions in the Commonwealth.

We must put an end to brutality in the treatment of the unfortunate insane. I do not know as yet whether the charges in regard to the Worcester institution are true. But an investigation is in progress and I am carefully following all developments.

If the charges are true, then there will be some drastic changes at Worcester.

To Hold Special Meeting.

The State Board of Insanity will hold a special meeting this week on the Worcester matter. There is a possibility that a change of officials will be ordered then. Dr. Charles E. Thompson, secretary and executive officer of the board, is preparing his report of his investigations of the Worcester charges.

The charges of ill treatment of patients brought by thirty-six nurses through Dr. G. W. Galvin of Boston were added to today. Miss Bessie Lekanoff, one of the State nurses, declared: "Women patients are dragged naked through hallways, splinters from the floor frequently entering their bodies.

"The food is indescribable and many times served so that it is not palatable. Sometimes there are only two nurses to feed fifty-three patients in the receiving ward, and the patients there are in a helpless condition.

Employes Starved.

"The employes are practically starving for the want of proper food. Our week day dinners consist chiefly of poor fish, interspersed with beans served without vegetables.

"Six nurses are necessary to handle a violent patient, but at the hospital, because of insufficient help, two nurses are often compelled to give a patient a wet pack. The patient is handled roughly. A strong sheet is put over the patient's head and twisted tight back of her neck.

"While thus blindfolded she is dragged through the corridors, one nurse holding the sheet wound around her head and the other her feet."

Bar Wives' Pictures in Railroad Watches

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Pictures of wives and sweethearts have been barred from the watchcases of employees of the Illinois Central Railroad. Officials say they distract attention from duty.

Boy of 16 Hero of Wrecked Schooner

Daring with Distress Signals Saved Lives of Crew.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The name of George McAloon, a sixteen-year-old sailor, was extolled among the heroes of the sea today when the liner Berlin arrived here with the crew of the schooner Mallory Brown, which went down in a gale off Nantucket.

With the sea pounding the schooner from stem to stern and rolling her about like a cask in a whirlpool, McAloon twice climbed to the top of the mainmast, first to hoist the distress signal and again to unfurl it after the wind had wrapped it about the mast. Three times on his second climb the gale almost threw him off but he managed to hang on. It was due to his efforts that the crew were saved, as the Berlin would have passed the schooner by if it had not been for the distress signals.

Mother and Three Children Flee Fire

Cottage Home and Contents Destroyed in Quincy.

Mrs. Martin Keefe and her three young children were driven in their night clothes from their home at No. 210 Rhoda street, in the Rock Island district of Quincy, by a fire that destroyed their cottage early today.

Mrs. Keefe had returned to bed after preparing breakfast for her husband, who is a carpenter at Harvard University. When awakened by her five-year-old boy she found the cottage burning fiercely. She fought her way through the thick smoke with her year-old baby in her arms, the other two children clinging to her. Her cries soon brought help.

Police Nose Smells Tragedy in a Trunk

GLOUCESTER, Oct. 22.—About midnight last night the station agent and other attaches of the Boston & Maine thought they had unearthed a trunk tragedy. The trunk, unmarked except for the check, gave out a very offensive odor.

The conclusion was at once arrived at that it contained a decomposed corpse. The police station was notified and in turn Medical Examiner Quimby was summoned to the scene. The trunk was burst open and the mystery was solved.

The contents were limburger cheese and cabbage.

Glass to Defend Bill for President

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Aroused by the attacks of former Governor Stokes of New Jersey on the administration currency bill, Representative Carter Glass, joint author of the measure, will go to Trenton, N. J., on October 27, to make a vigorous reply on behalf of President Wilson. The plan has the sanction of the President.

May Start Rival Drug Store Chain

It became known today that George J. Whelan and his associates in the United Cigar Stores Company will establish a new chain of drug stores provided they are unable to buy control of the Riker-Hegeman-Jaynes Drug Company. The United Chemists' Company has already been founded with $20,000,000 capital.

Portuguese Soldiers Revolt; Kill Chief

VIGO, Spain, Oct. 22.—A regiment of Portuguese artillery in North Portugal has revolted, killing its commander.

PROUTY SUMMONS ELLIOTT AND M'DONALD.

President Elliott of the New Haven and President McDonald of the Boston & Maine were today summoned to appear before Interstate Commerce Commissioner Prouty in connection with the present hearing in Boston into the Boston & Maine rates.

$5,000 BAIL FOR THREE ALLEGED THIEVES.

Bail was fixed at $5,000 by United States Commissioner Hayes today in the cases of Dominick Crego, John Hartley and David Jaeger, all of New York city, who were arrested by United States Deputy Marshal Bancroft on the charge of stealing a lot of woollen goods valued at $400 from the New Haven Railroad.

'GAVE NORWOOD CHIEF MONEY TO DODGE TRIAL'

Two residents of Norwood gave testimony to the Board of Selectmen today at the resumed hearing of the charges against former Chief of Police James W. Lavers, to the effect that they paid the chief money to escape prosecution.

Mrs. Tesaka testified that an officer told her to see the chief on account of a case against her. "There was a man," she said, "who was hurt falling off the plazza when I pushed him out the door. I went to see the chief. He said: 'You know me and I know you; come around and see me tomorrow.' I went around with $25. I offered him the money but he said he could not take anything, but to put it in his pocket. I put it in his vest pocket and then he took it out and put it somewhere else."

"Did the Chief say anything to you?" questioned Town Counsel James J. Halloran, which made you do this?

"Yes," she continued, "I can't take this money" he said, 'so put it in my pocket,' and I did.

"I was not arrested or brought into court on account of the man who was hurt."

Antonio Fedas testified that he witnessed a payment of $5 by John Zurba, on February 15, 1912, to the chief, that Zurba might escape a larceny charge with a small fine.

"I went to court with Zurba," testified Fedas as interpreter. "He was arrested for larceny. The chief called Zurba over to him and said that he would make it easier if he gave him something. 'Very serious case,' chief said. I can make it easy for you. John was found guilty and was fined $5. When we came out of the court the chief followed us out. John gave him $5."

John Zurba also testified, corroborating the testimony of Fedas.

Vincent Regis told of the $25 he paid to the chief for police protection at a wedding he held. "I wanted a wedding with beer," he testified, "and when I went to the depot I could not get my beer. So I saw the chief. He said, 'Come, see me tomorrow,' and I did. I paid him $15 for an officer to attend the wedding, and $10 for his trouble. I knew I had to have a policeman. I got my beer then. 28½ gallons."

Schumann-Heink to Educate Policeman

Great Contralto Discovers Remarkable Baritone on the Force.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 22.—Edward James McNamara, a Paterson, N. J., policeman, so captivated Madame Schumann-Heink when she heard him sing that she has undertaken his education along musical lines, and he is entered as a student in voice culture in the University of Michigan School of Music. McNamara is said to possess a wonderful voice and the teachers here are enthusiastic over the prospects.

A son of the great German contralto heard McNamara sing and when he told his mother she went to Paterson and had McNamara sing for her. Confident that the policeman would become a star, she arranged for his education here with a promise that if he developed, as she hoped, she would arrange for the completion of his education abroad. McNamara is a baritone.

PLAN BATTLE AGAINST NEW HAVEN BONDS

Active preparation for an appeal to the courts to block the $67,322,000 preferential bond issue of the New Haven Railroad, as approved by the Public Service Commission, were begun by attorneys representing former United States Senator Morgan G. Bulkeley of Connecticut in a joint conference held in Boston today.

Former Railroad Commissioner James P. Jackson, local counsel for Bulkeley, ex-Congressman Lewis Sperry, and Attorney Andrew F. Hatch, both of Hartford, took part in the conference. Their meeting today was held behind closed doors, and no formal announcement was made of their actual plan to block the New Haven bond issue. But there is no question of their intention to act in the immediate future, and it is said that they are confident of having the decision of the Public Service Commission overruled or at least reviewed by the Supreme Court of Massachusetts.

STOCKHOLDERS IN STRONG SESSION ON BOND ISSUE

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 22.—To accommodate an unusually large attendance of the New Haven road stockholders in this city today, the annual meeting was called in Harmonie Hall, it being the first time in recent years such a meeting has been held out of the regular office building of the company.

Colors Trees in a Single Day

German at Tacoma Changes Fibre and Foliage by Inoculation.

TACOMA, Wash., Oct. 22.—By injecting a certain fluid into living trees every three in them, leaves included, can be artificially colored for all time in twenty-four hours, according to Dr. Martin Kleinstueck, professor at the German Forestry School at Tharandt, near Dresden.

Dr. Kleinstueck arrived here last week from Japan en route home via New York. He carries many samples of woods that reveal beautiful finish. He says woods can be made to appear as very old material eagerly sought for some purposes at high prices.

Details of process will be revealed in treatises he will publish in Germany. Dr. Kleinstueck says the Japanese are far advanced in wood treating and preserving processes.

Change in Program of Mme. Pavlowa

Mme. Pavlowa has made considerable changes in the program which she and her company will present at the Boston Opera House on Saturday afternoon and evening. The two ballets "The Magic Flute" and "Invitation to the Dance" which were announced yesterday as the principal features of the matinee are to be done in the evening instead. The former, arranged by M. Novikoff to music by Bolgi, will be a pantomime with the scene in a French village during the reign of Louis XV. Much that is exquisite in setting, costume and dance is promised, and of course the leading roles will fall to Mme. Pavlowa and M. Novikoff. The Weber number will be costumed in the period of 1830 and the stage picture will represent a ball room.

Talks Home Economies.

Miss Laura Comstock, the recently appointed head of the Home Economics Department of the Agricultural College at Amherst, opened a series of six talks on "home economics" given by the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, at Perkin Hall. Miss Comstock talked on "Friends and Foes of the Household."

EUGENICS

"A JOKE," Says Man Doctor.

"EUGENICS is a joke," says Dr. George Dearborn of Tufts. "Any law requiring a certificate of health from the parties to a marriage would be an infringement of personal liberty. It would not be tolerated by thoughtful people. Asceticism and ignorance are at the root of much of the viciousness of present day prudery, but law is not the remedy."

"NECESSARY," Says Woman Doctor.

"EUGENICS is a necessary factor in the future of the race," says Dr. Caroline Herger of Chicago.

"The average Chicago girl is unfit for motherhood. Girls are of three classes—those so fine nothing can hurt them; those nervous, tubercular and irritable ones who have no right to motherhood, and those girls with moral weaknesses, who may be schooled to motherhood."

GIRL SAYS SHE WAS DRUGGED AND ABDUCTED

Pretty Ethel Scraggs, a seventeen-year-old girl of 33 Clair street, Lowell, was found weeping in the Waltham railroad station early today by Sergeant Closnan of the Waltham police.

She declared that she had been drugged and abducted in broad daylight Tuesday afternoon as she was coming out of the postoffice at Lowell.

She had been inside to post a letter, and as she came out upon the sidewalk two men who were waiting in an automobile seized her, she said, placed her in an automobile and clapped a drug-soaked cloth over her nostrils.

The next she remembers, she says, was when she woke up on a couch in a house. She does not know where the house is. She says the men did not molest her, but again took her in their automobile to a lonely piece of road, where they made her get out, and then rapidly drove away. She walked about a mile and came to the Waltham railroad station. She had no money and no means of returning to her home.

She described the men as about forty-five and forty years of age. One wore a blue suit, the other a brown suit.

The girl's mother was notified by phone and arrived on the morning train. She said the girl had received threatening letters, but she did not give any details about the letters. She took the girl home.

Fight 'Segregation' in Currency Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—The complete elimination of that provision of the pending currency bill which would require the segregation of the savings deposits by banks entering the proposed system will be pressed by members of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. The present attitude of the committee indicates that the section will be rewritten if not cast out. This section has been opposed strenuously by the "one-man banks." It is the purpose of the committee to wait until next week to begin consideration of the bill in executive session.

Men Go Decollette in Paris Theatre

PARIS, Oct. 22.—Decollette for men made its appearance in a Paris theatre for the first time and caused a mild riot. Shortly before the curtain arose at the Varieties Theatre, two young men took seats in front row stalls. Both had shaved white silk shirts with soft wing collars with V shaped openings in front, exposing at least three inches of chest.

made the car in ten swift steps, and before Bertram saw he had escaped. Thaw was in the automobile and the machine was rushing down the hill and turning toward the Connecticut line, thirty miles away.

He reached Connecticut safely, crossed that State, went through Massachusetts and abandoned the car in northern New Hampshire, taking a train for Canada.

When he was captured there Roger Thompson, a New York chauffeur, was with him, and Jerome is believed will attempt to indict Thompson for his connection with the escape.

THAW WRITES TO ASK IF CANADA WILL STILL BE OPEN TO HIM

OTTAWA, Ont., Oct. 22.—Harry Thaw has written Dr. Roche, the Minister in Charge of the Immigration Department, asking if in the event the New Hampshire authorities grant him a discharge Canada would object to his passing through the Dominion en route to Europe.

Dr. Roche replied that he could not answer a hypothetical question. But it is generally believed here that if Thaw had a steamer ticket to Europe, and made use of it, he would be allowed to pass through this country to the coast, and would be permitted to sail.

HARRY K. THAW IS AFRAID OF NEW YORK JURY

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 22.—Harry K. Thaw today frankly confessed his alarm at W. T. Jerome's wholesale summoning of witnesses for the sitting of the New York County Grand Jury Thursday.

"If some new witness is put on who makes misstatements similar to those already made by Mr. Jerome and District Attorney Conger," he said, "I fear an indictment will be returned against me."

Among those subpoenaed for the New York Grand Jury are Howard H. Barnum, the attendant who is under bonds in Dutchess County, charged with aiding Thaw's escape from Matteawan; William Gordon, proprietor of the Holland Hotel; James Hickey, the milkman who drove the wagon at the time Thaw rushed out through the gate; Mrs. James Maher, the landress at the hospital, who saw the automobile waiting outside the gate for Thaw, and Dr. Kieb, medical superintendent of the hospital.

Thaw Discusses Case.

"I must confess to much anxiety," declared Thaw today, "as some witness may be induced to make another false statement.

"I have cause for anxiety, as on September 23 Mr. Jerome told Governor Felker that he had an indictment but had not yet had it filed. This was false.

"It was not until later he admitted he had no indictment. Then he had 'Eddie' Conger write a letter claiming that September 18 the Grand Jury found an indictment. This was false.

"A month later briefs filed before Governor Felker contradict this and show that at two different times 'no bill' was voted. After these two deceptions, I am anxious, because a New York county Grand Jury cannot know the situation like a Dutchess county Grand Jury.

"Of course, no insane man can be indicted honestly; while, if an indictment were made against an insane man, it would be illegal—however, I do not want further falsehoods anywhere.

Dutchess County Failure.

"There was no sufficient evidence obtainable for Jerome to get an indictment in Dutchess County. All who testified at that hearing will not be present, I understand, in New York. Some who testified in Dutchess County have since admitted they gave wrong evidence because they had formed a wrong impression. So it seems as if Jerome's case in New York would be normally weaker than in Dutchess County."

Thaw's lawyer declared today that, if Jerome succeeds in getting an indictment in New York County, they will wait until the case comes before the United States District Court. Then they will make an investigation themselves as to just what evidence was given the Grand Jury to obtain this indictment, and how the witnesses were induced to testify.

ON EVE OF VICTORY, SAYS PANKHURST

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the famous British suffragette leader who delivered her first American lecture in Madison Square Garden, last night, proclaimed today her intention of keeping up militant methods in England until the fight for woman suffrage is won. She said:

We are determined to go right ahead with militant methods. We will keep driving until we drive the Liberals out and put the Conservatives into power. Then the Conservatives will begin a campaign for votes—a desperate, violent campaign—and in waging this fight the Conservatives will promise the ballot to women.

Militancy is increasing in England. I believe that the women of England are on the eve of getting the ballot.

The men had to fight for the ballot. Violence was their favorite weapon. They had to break laws in order to make new ones.

The acts of the English suffragettes are performed on the same grounds as were those of the men before they had the vote.

I found an American audience delightful. My hearers grasped points in British politics almost as well as an English audience could have grasped them.

MILITANTS MUST TAKE LIFE OR BACK DOWN, SAYS REV. ANNA SHAW

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22.—That Mrs. Pankhurst and the other militants of England have reached a point where they will either have to take human life in the carrying on of their campaign of militancy or take a backward course was the declaration made here again by Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National Association for

In her opinion, the militants would be glad to take the back track if they could find any way of doing so and at the same time save their faces. Dr. Shaw, who was opposed to the coming of Mrs. Pankhurst to this country at this time, said:

"The reason why I did not think it was just the thing for Mrs. Pankhurst to come to America at this time is because we have on our hands nine campaigns, any one of which is of more importance to the cause of woman's suffrage in the world than is the campaign of Mrs. Pankhurst in England."

Having dealt with you since I was a student at Harvard in '70-'72, I have in no instance failed to receive goods as I expected, and often better, and from such experience, I regard your firm as men of honor and your dealings as trustworthy.

Enclosed is payment.

I remain,
Most sincerely yours,
(Signed) Rev. CHARLES H. TINDELL.

With thanks for your promptness.

DRAMATIC LOVE STORY OF EVELYN AND HARRY THAW

CHAPTER LI.

"Cassio, I love thee;
But nevermore be officer of mine."—
("Othello.")

DENTISTRY WITHOUT PAIN

My own exclusive French and German Painless Methods have proven entirely satisfactory to the thousands of patients who come to my office from all parts of New England.

My prices are positively the lowest consistent with high-grade, reliable dentistry and my only competitors are the so-called [illegible] dentists who charge double my prices.

All work is thoroughly guaranteed, because I use only the best of material and [illegible] careful, expert workmanship.

I want you to call and get my estimate. See for yourself that I am doing an honest, [illegible] business under sanitary conditions. Instruments sterilized and cared for.

My perfect-fitting teeth are just as firm and solid as if they grew in your mouth. Look natural.

The letter which Harry wrote, dismissing Judge Olcott and his associates, became another notable document in the case. It read as follows:

New York City, July 14, 1906.
Messrs. Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge:

Dear Sirs—After a careful consideration I have concluded to make a change in my attorneys, and, while I have no possible criticism of your conduct of my case, my decision is such that I have concluded to no longer retain you as my attorneys.

You will therefore regard your connection with my case as finished and will please deliver all papers in my case to Clifford W. Hartridge. I have sent a copy of this letter to Mr. Hartridge and ask you to communicate with him at once. Yours truly, HARRY K. THAW.

Hartridge in the Case.

The moment this letter was made public—for Harry gave out a copy of it himself for publication—everyone at all familiar with the case understood right away that Harry had broken with his first counsel because he could not run his own defence to suit himself. He would be patient and physician, too.

The public was tremendously interested in the new counsel and in any new line of defence which would be indicated.

Clifford W. Hartridge was the lawyer who had been calling at Harry's cell "on civil business," as the explanation ran. Harry had known Hartridge several years and had much respect for him. The lawyer was born in Savannah, went to Yale, rowed on the '86 crew, came to New York and established a large and profitable practice in the civil courts. He was a strong Tammany man and had many powerful political friends. He married a daughter of Supreme Court Justice Leslie W. Russell. His marriage naturally tended to give him legal prestige, but Hartridge had built a practice on his merits.

The reporters immediately pursued Hartridge, insisting that he tell them something. He was also asked if Harry's action might not be construed as a cunning move to indicate insanity. Hartridge replied:

That is not so. The suggestion of that comes from the District Attorney's office. Mr. Thaw's letter speaks for itself. Mr. Olcott and his firm were engaged by Mr. Delafield, who represented Thaw at first. Mr. Delafield, I believe, is no longer retained by Mr. Thaw. Mr. Thaw's present lawyers are John B. Gleason, Frederick W. Longfellow, Mr. Peabody, who is my partner and myself.

I shall take a few days to go over the case and then may hire some other lawyers to assist us in trying the case. But you can depend upon it that nobody will be hired who will be in any way unsatisfactory to Mr. Thaw. His wishes will be consulted first of all.

Demand for Jury.

Thaw wants to go before a jury. He is absolutely opposed to any insanity plea. He believes that he is perfectly sane, that he can prove it.

AS SURE AS I STAND HERE NOW I BELIEVE THAT HE WILL NOT BE CONVICTED OF ANYTHING. I WILL STAKE MY SOUL ON THAT. ALL HE WANTS IS A CHANCE. HE DOESN'T WANT ANY MORE CHANCE THAN WOULD BE GIVEN TO THE ORDINARY MAN. HE DOESN'T WANT TO FEEL THAT MONEY HAS AIDED HIM IN ANY WAY. HE BELIEVES THAT, WHEN HIS CASE IS FAIRLY PLACED BEFORE A JURY, HE WILL BE ACQUITTED.

Hartridge declined to discuss Judge Olcott, who was one of his personal friends. He said he had received part of the Thaw legal papers and expected the rest Monday from Judge Olcott, including the famous statement which Evelyn had made, giving the story of her life and particularly her relations with Stanford White.

Gives Her Own Version of the Shooting of Stanford White
IN NEXT SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN

Then Hartridge said to the reporters:

I want a full and frank understanding with the men who are following this case for the newspapers. I wish first of all that nobody shall be misled and that no stories detrimental or untrue as to either side shall get into print and be credited to the counsel for Harry Thaw. As it is, many stories have been printed that have hurt the case in the minds of the public and friends of both persons most concerned in this affair. All that we want is the truth. It will come out in good time.

Hartridge was asked if the extra alienists retained by Judge Olcott were now all out of a job. He said that they would still be kept under retainer. When asked what need he would have of them, if Thaw was sane, he said it would not be fair to dismiss the alienists who had been retained, but he did not explain just what the defence would do with them.

Wishes Were Defied.

Then the reporters hurried over to the offices of Black, Olcott, Gruber & Bonynge, to see what the dismissed attorney had to say. One of the firm made this statement:

Our firm was not engaged by Harry Thaw, but by Delafield & Longfellow, who are counsel for Harry Thaw's mother, and were counsel for Harry Thaw's father during the elder Thaw's lifetime. They retained us to take charge of the criminal end of Harry Thaw's case. We have been obliged in making our plans for the defence of young Thaw, to go along lines in defiance of his wishes. Further than that I do not care to talk just now.

That was all that the member of the dismissed firm would say then. It was sufficient to show, however, that Harry's determination to be tried as a sane man was the cause of the break between him and his counsel.

There was a hint in the statement of Judge Olcott's firm in saying that Thaw had not hired them in the first place that the firm might not take Harry's dismissal so obediently.

A big legal firm like Black, Olcott, Gruber and Bonynge, of which ex-Governor Black himself was the senior partner, was not to be tossed aside as lightly as Harry Thaw thought suitable, at least not without seeing that its own reputation did not suffer.

Harry, meanwhile, was pleased as a child with a new toy. He had "bounced" his old lawyers. He was busy with the new. He was—or thought he was—at the helm.

Sympathy for Mother.

Harry wanted to [illegible] Hartridge. He wrote him a note Sunday, which was delivered to Hartridge at the rooms of the Bar Association, just as Hartridge was talking to the reporters. It was a long note. The messenger said he was told to get an answer. So Hartridge sat down and wrote a reply to Harry's missive—whatever it was about.

Meanwhile Mrs. William Thaw, or Mrs. Mary Copley Thaw, to use the widow's name—Harry's patient mother—had arrived on Saturday afternoon, but was not to see Harry in the Tombs until Monday.

The mother, who had the heartfelt sympathy of all New York, needed the rest to prepare her for the ordeal of going to see her son through the cell bars of "Murderers' Row."

Small Cost Trip to California "Personally Conducted."

The "personally conducted" parties that leave every week for California are organized for those who want attentive service and comfortable sleeping car accommodations at small cost.

For years we have made these parties famous for the complete manner in which all the little details of the trip are looked after.

The Tourist sleeping cars used are scrupulously clean and comfortable; a Special conductor goes all the way through to look after things generally and relieve you of all responsibility; and the route has been selected because of its great beauty and unusual interest.

Will you permit me to explain further regarding these attractive parties, and [illegible] to your tickets and baggage and sleeping car berths? Write or call on

W. R. HEARST ARRAIGNS ALL OLD PARTIES

THEIR REPEATED FAILURES SHOW NEED FOR NEW MOVEMENT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—William Randolph Hearst, in addresses delivered at two great Independence League mass meetings at Cooper Union and Cooper Hall here, promulgated the most remarkable political document of recent years.

The addresses were a comprehensive view of the nation-wide political situation, although they purported to deal only with New York's mayoralty campaign.

Mr. Hearst showed in vivid language the relation between the different parties. He showed how the Democrats have ignored or ruined glorious opportunities. He showed how the Republican party has established itself as the party of the reactionary. He showed how the Progressive party has failed, because of its alliance with the Morgan interests, to deal comprehensively with the great problems of the day.

Here is Mr. Hearst's address:

Mr. Hearst's Speech.

My Friends:

The Independence party was born as a radical party. It became a potent political factor through its consistent and persistent adherence to sound and judicious radical principles.

It has written its principles into the platforms of other parties, old and new. It has seen many of its advocacies transformed into accomplished facts. It has already done much in its brief career to serve the State and advance the cause of progress.

But I believe that the opportunities and duties of the Independence party are greater for the future than in the past, and that there are more room and reason for a genuinely independent and fearlessly radical party today than ever before.

If it is true that the radicalism of today is the conservatism of tomorrow, it is equally true that with the dawn of each new day there is opportunity for a new radical advance, for a further forward step in the direction of social justice and political progress.

Radicals Real Progressives.

The progress of the world has been wrought by radicals—by men who had the imagination to see, the devotion to sacrifice, the determination to succeed.

If the Darwinian theory is true, the first monkey who slid down the trunk of a tree and stood upon his hind legs was a radical. The conservative monkeys hung by their tails from the topmost branches and reviled him. They called him an adventurer, an agitator, an anarchist. They said that he had no respect for law and usage. They said that he had struck at the very foundations of simian society. They said that he had upset the established and ordained order of things, and they said that the tail hold, which was good enough for their fathers, was good enough for them.

But the radical monkey lifted up his face in hope to heaven and stood erect and walked, and in the lapse of ages the radical became a man and the conservative remained a monkey.

Conservatism, of course, has its value, but it is at best a negative value.

Conservatism should act as a brake on undue haste, but it too often acts as a bar to needed progress.

Radicalism is the motive power of progress, the impulse and inspiration to human advancement.

Ignominious Failure.

In every campaign some political party should give expression to the ideas and purposes of genuine and judicious radicalism, and the Independence party can have no higher mission than to be the medium for the expression of these ideas, the means for the accomplishment of those purposes.

No other party so wholly satisfies the requirements of sincere independence and of sound radicalism.

At the last election I had hallucinations about the Democratic party. I had been raised a Democrat. I had been taught to respect the party for its early achievements. I thought that perhaps it still held some lingering flame of its former glory.

I knew that at the last election the Democratic party had opportunities for beneficial achievement as great as were ever presented to any political organization in the history of the world, and I did not believe that any collection of human beings could be found on the face of the earth either with skill enough or stupidity enough to avoid those opportunities.

But I made a mistake.

I did the Democratic party a grave injustice.

I owe it an apology.

With a mile-wide, deep-water channel to success directly in its path, it has managed to avoid the stream and to bump the good old Ship of State over every rock and reef in the political harbor.

It has failed ignominiously to carry forward the great Democratic naval program begun under Cleveland, and it has squandered the money available for an adequate navy in postoffices for Podunk and custom houses for Crossroads Centre.

It has failed to fulfil its platform promise to protect the lives and legitimate interests of American citizens throughout the world, and in so failing it has ignored every established Democratic precedent since Jefferson humbled the Bey of Tripoli in 1804 and Madison punished England in the War of 1812.

Jeopardize Monroe Doctrine.

It has jeopardized the Monroe Doctrine, which Monroe, our great Democratic President, so nobly enunciated, and Cleveland, another great Democratic President, so boldly and bravely upheld.

It has repudiated the reciprocity of Jefferson. It has opened our markets to the products of foreign countries without having had the business sense to require reciprocal concessions of foreign markets in the interests of the producers of our own country.

It proposes to curtail our territorial possessions, although nearly all of the great accessions of territory which have made this country the powerful, important nation it is have taken place under Democratic Presidents.

It has proceeded so unwisely and so undemocratically that I feel there is no longer room in its ranks for either a radical or a Democrat.

The Republican party is openly and avowedly the party of reaction—so, obviously, there is no room for a radical there.

The Progressive party sounds well, and doubtless means well, and sometimes does well. I confess to a strong sympathy with that movement. But to my mind it is time for the Progressive party to be weaned from its wet nurses in Wall Street. It is time for it to let go of the sugared nipple which its foster fathers in high finance employ to stop its cries on critical occasions.

It is time for it stand alone on its little radical legs, if it has that kind of legs—and no longer hand on to the reactionary coat-tails of Mr. Perkins and Mr. Morgan.

The Progressive platform is a satisfying document in some of its declarations which we of the Independence party contributed, and a disappointing document in other declarations which we did not devise.

It is like the book which, I think, Dean Swift reviewed, saying that it was full of good and original things, but the original things were not good and the good things were not original.

"Foot and a Half Wide."

The Progressive platform also reminds me of the magnificent flight of fancy of the imaginative man who was describing his country establishment to a party of friends.

He said it was a hundred feet high and two hundred feet long, and then he caught his wife's cold, critical, condemning eye, and concluded lamely by saying "and a foot and a half wide."

My friends, in some national matters the Progressive platform is a hundred feet high, and in many local matters it is two hundred feet long; but when it catches the cold, calculating glance of Mr. Perkins it is only a foot and a half wide. When it relates to such Morgan matters as the New York & New Haven monopoly and the Interborough steal it is only a foot and a half wide.

No sturdy, sterling radical can stand safely on that kind of a platform. It isn't wide enough.

I have registered in the Independence party, and I want to see the Independence party do its utmost to advance the cause of honest independence and genuine radicalism in this and every other campaign.

I want to see it stand for patriotic principles in national affairs, and progressive principles in internal affairs.

I want to see it reward honest and faithful public servants and repudiate and punish dishonorable and unfaithful public servants.

I want to see it continue and complete its long-sustained fight against the corruption of political machines and the arrogant dictation of political bosses.

I want to see it defeat not only the Tammany machine, but the Republican machine. I want to see it depose not only Boss Murphy, but Boss Barnes.

Right Must Triumph.

I want to see it compel the recognition of the right of the people to govern themselves. I want to see it force the adoption of the Initiative and the Referendum and the Recall.

I want to see it compel the acceptance of the principle of direct nominations, for the advocacy of which Governor Sulzer was impeached.

I do not excuse that gentleman's weakness. I do not condone his offenses. I do not forgive his appointment of Murphy's messenger, McCall, as Public Service Commissioner.

But it was not for these that Governor Sulzer was impeached. It was for his one solitary attempt at semi-self-respecting independence.

I want to see the Independence party pile up a mighty vote of protest against this man McCall and the Big Chief who controls him and the big interests which control both.

I want to see it elect Mr. Mitchel and Mr. Sutro and Mr. Simmons and its whole ticket of honorable and efficient gentlemen to give this long-suffering city an honest and efficient administration, to prove to even the most sordid and selfish citizen that political honesty is the best policy; that judicious radicalism is the best patriotism; that progress and prosperity can and do and ever must go hand in hand.

Then, when we have won the battle here, I want to see it lead the radical hosts to victory wherever impudent bossism lies intrenched, wherever oppressive privilege sits enthroned.

City Drugstore Is Plan in Cambridge

Supply of Medicines to the Poor Is Urged.

Cambridge may have a municipal drug store. As the result of an order passed by both branches of the City Government, a committee consisting of three members of the Council and three of the Board of Aldermen will confer with Mayor Barry in regard to the establishment of such a store in the basement of City Hall, in order to supply the poor of the city.

The order was introduced by Councilman Fred Hamilton. The committee appointed includes Councilmen Hull, Hamilton and Whalen, and Aldermen McAvoy, Kelliher and Mullen.

Eject Soldier for Honoring the Flag

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—J. Frank Wahl, a former soldier, stood up when the band in a local theatre played "The Star Spangled Banner" and was put out for creating disorder. He will sue for damages.

ESTELLE WILSON STEAD, daughter of the late William T. Stead, who declared today that her father had communicated with her after his death on the Titanic.

DAUGHTER OF STEAD TELLS HOW HE DIED

Miss Estelle Wilson Stead, daughter of William T. Stead, who is now in this city for a few weeks, said her father was struck on the head by a blow, before he went down on the Titanic.

She had this communication from him at the time. He was a strong believer in one spirit communicating with another.

"My father just after he passed into the unseen communicated with me," said Miss Stead.

"He told me of that awful night. As he was going down into the cabin, something struck him. It was a terrible blow. He never regained consciousness of this world, but passed at once into the abode of the spirits.

"The terrible scenes of that disaster were told me. My father's sympathy went out to the terror-stricken who were all around him. In going down into the cabin to do some one a service, he met his end.

"For some time I have had communication with him.

"One does not want to talk so much about these things as to think them. You can't tell all that you feel is coming to you from one in the spirit world.

"It is a great comfort to dwell upon these messages, but not tell them. Since he has gone he has told me to come to America. I told him that I was going. He knows that I am here in this country now.

"I am here to renew some of the happy friendships that my father valued. He thought so much of William R. Hearst and he wants me to call upon him while I am here. He was very kind to my father. I shall enjoy telling Mr. Hearst my gratitude for him, expressed to me by my father.

"You know that I'm on the stage. While in this city I expect to reproduce some of the well-known characters in Shakespeare's plays. Portia and Lady Macbeth are my favorites. Then I am going to do some work on Ibsen plays.

"All through England I have played. At first my father did not take kindly to my stage career, but after a time he gave me every encouragement. I do so miss him now. His counsel and his co-operation in many ways were always an inspiration.

Foss at Lynn Rally Tonight

Governor Foss will open his campaign tonight with a big open-air rally in front of the City Hall in Lynn. From now until election day the Governor will hold open-air rallies practically every day and night. It will be the first open-air rally of the Governor's present campaign, and if present plans are carried out he will introduce himself.

Mayor to Take Stump in Lynn

Mayor Fitzgerald will take the stump tomorrow night for the first time during the present campaign, and will speak at Democratic rallies in Lynn and Peabody. From then on to the end of the campaign he will speak daily in various parts of the State in the interest of the entire Democratic State ticket.

Fall River Hears Gardner Tonight

Congressman A. P. Gardner is scheduled to make four speeches at Fall River tonight. He is passing the day at New Bedford, where he spoke last night. A group of the New Bedford speakers went to Middleboro at noon today by automobile and held a rally there. Former Governor Curtis Guild has been added to the speakers at the Fall River rallies, which include Attorney-General James M. Swift, Charles L. Burrill, E. Mark Sullivan, Councillor Guy A. Ham, Sherwin L. Cook, Leonard Withington and Representative Barnes.

HAIR CAME OUT BY HANDFULS

Eczema on Head. Dandruff Scaled Off. Itched and Burned. Scratched and Made Sores. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Cured.

R. F. D. No. 5, Brewer, Me.—"I had been troubled with eczema on my head for a year. At first it came on in the form of dandruff which scaled off and showed plainly in my hair and then there was a rash that itched and burned and would wake me from my sleep. I scratched and made sores that would bleed. My hair came out by handfuls and was thin and dry.

"I used several kinds of soap without getting any relief. At last I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment, applying the Cuticura Ointment at night and washing my head in the morning with Cuticura Soap and warm water and after the first time using them the itching and burning stopped. After using Cuticura Soap and Ointment one month my head was completely cured and my hair began to grow out again." (Signed) Miss Annie E. Williamson, Nov. 7, 1912.

The regular use of Cuticura Soap for toilet and bath not only tends to preserve, purify and beautify the skin, scalp, hair and hands, but assists in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin. Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

BISHOP PLEADS FOR PHILIPPINE MISSIONARIES

Bishop Doherty of the Philippine Islands delivered an eloquent address on conditions in the Philippines at the session today of the Catholic Missionary Congress in Symphony Hall. A splendid audience heard the address, in which Bishop Doherty suggested that every diocese in the United States should send at least one missionary to the Philippines and pay his expenses.

Bishop Doherty declared that there are many parishes in the United States which can well afford to send missionaries to the Philippines. The outlay would not exceed $400 a year.

Mass Meetings Tonight.

With mass meetings throughout the diocese tonight, the congress will come to an end, after one of the most enthusiastic and successful gatherings of its kind ever held under the auspices of the Catholic Church.

Two of the nine mass meetings planned will be held in Boston proper, others are scheduled for suburban churches, and still others will be held in the larger cities of Massachusetts.

At Symphony Hall, with Cardinal O'Connell presiding, four addresses will be heard. The first will be by His Excellence, the second by the Most Rev. John B. Pitaval, D. D., Archbishop of Santa Fe; the third by Jeremiah E. Burke of Boston, and the fourth by Joseph Scott of Los Angeles. Several hymns by Cardinal O'Connell will be sung.

At the Mission Church Hall, Archbishop Blenk, D. D., of New Orleans, presiding, addresses will be given by the chairman, the Right Rev. P. J. Donahue, D. D., Bishop of Wheeling, and Quinn O'Brien of Chicago.

In St. Augustine's Hall, the Right Rev. Bishop Muldoon, of Rockford, Ill., will preside, and deliver an address. The second address will be made by Bishop John Carroll, D. D., Bishop of Helena, and the third by Patrick O'Donnell.

Judge Keating to Speak.

In Boston College Hall, Bishop John J. Hennessy, of Wichita; the Right Rev. Bishop Heffron, of Winona, Minn., and Patrick M. Keating, Judge of the Superior Court, will speak.

Bishop Henry O'Leary, D. D., of Charlottetown, will preside at Columbus Hall, Malden, and the speakers will be Bishop Thos. of Lincoln, and P. J. Carroll Cunniff.

Other mass meetings will be held in the Opera House at Lawrence, St. Patrick's Church, Lowell, St. Mary's Hall, Lynn, and St. Patrick's Hall, Brockton.

Spencer's Family Had Tragic History

CHICAGO, Oct. 22—The case of Henry Spencer, the confessed murderer now awaiting trial for killing Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat, has aroused widespread interest among students or criminology. An investigation of his antecedents has brought to light these facts:

That his father, a life-long victim of alcoholism, died a suicide.

That three years after his father had killed himself, Spencer's only brother took his own life.

That one of his sisters killed herself because of despondency after Spencer had been sentenced to his first term in prison.

McGregor on Stump in Council Fight

Executive Councillor Alexander McGregor, Republican candidate for reelection, will begin an active campaign tonight with four open-air rallies. At 7:30 he will speak in front of the new high school in Winthrop; at 8, at the Beachmont railroad station; later on the boulevard in front of the Revere postoffice, and later on Broadway, in front of the new fire engine house, Revere.

QUICKLY STOPS THE WORST BACKACHE

Croxone Makes Kidney Troubles, Bladder Disorders, Rheumatic Pains Vanish

If you suffer with backaching kidney trouble, have disagreeable bladder and urinary disorders, or are tortured with rheumatism, stiff joints and its heart-wrenching pains, you will be surprised how quickly and surely Croxone will relieve all such troubles.

It soaks right in through the walls, membranes and linings, neutralizes, dissolves and makes the kidney sift out and filter away the uric acid and poisons from the blood, and leaves the kidneys and urinary organs clean, strong, healthy and well.

It matters not how long you have suffered, how old you are, or what you have used, it is practically impossible to take Croxone without results. It starts to work the minute you take it, and is guaranteed to relieve you the first time you use it, or cost you nothing.

If you suffer with pains in your back and sides, or have any signs of kidney, bladder trouble or rheumatism, such as puffy swellings under the eyes or in the feet and ankles; if you are nervous, tired and run down, or bothered with urinary disorders, Croxone really will relieve your misery and do it quickly. An original package costs but a trifle, and all druggists are authorized to return the purchase price if it fails in a single case. Adv.

HUERTA BLOCKS THE LANDING OF DIAZ IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 22—A new and alarming twist was given to the situation here today when Felix Diaz arrived in the steamer Corcovada and was not allowed to land.

He was at first requested to delay his arrival by the messenger of General Huerta, who asked for time in which to arrange the troops in readiness to handle possible disorder. Great throngs sought to greet Diaz.

Diaz waited for several hours on the steamer and finally sent word that he was going to land anyway.

General Manuel Vidaurrazaga, private secretary to Secretary of War Blanquet, demanded him to wait. It was said here that Vidaurrazaga left for Vera Cruz armed with a warrant for the arrest of Diaz should he insist on landing.

Political developments are rapidly moving to a crisis here. The relations of the various parties are becoming so strained that even the most conservative fear bloodshed before the presidential election, now only four days away.

Brief conflicts already have broken out between the followers of Frederico Gamboa and Felix Diaz, but the police thus far have been able to prevent the use of arms. Felicistas are posting circulars everywhere in the city insulting the Catholic party whose candidate is Gamboa, but those are torn down almost as soon as posted.

Daily diplomatic conferences are being held at the United States Embassy, but thus far the British envoy has held no consultation with Nelson O'Shaughnessy, the acting American ambassador. This is believed to be due to the desire of Sir Lionel Carden to strengthen Great Britain's position if there is an open rupture with the United States and Mexico.

ENGLAND SNUBS U. S. ON WILSON'S HUERTA POLICY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 — Great Britain has apparently snubbed the United States on the declaration of President Wilson's policy as to Huerta, which was submitted for discussion to the British foreign office by Ambassador Page.

The policy which President Wilson signed and sent to the Huerta government, was that he would not recognize the October elections. This was presented to the British foreign affairs minister for comment.

Great Britain replied substantially that the action of the United States was premature and that Great Britain would declare no policy until after the election had been held. The clear intimation of the British reply was that it was not the habit of Great Britain to decide international questions in advance.

MEXICAN GIRLS SAVE 27 AMERICANS; WIFE OF YANKEE IS SLAIN

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 22.—Refugees who arrived here on the transport Buford from Mexico tell of horrifying outrages.

"One of the worst," said Mrs. Mary Tuvelson of Durango, "was that inflicted on a young American and his wife at Durango. The revolutionists of General Carranza seized the couple in their home. They roped the husband fast and tied his wife to her bed, where they finally killed her.

"Twenty-seven Americans were lined up against a building in Durango to be shot by the rebels, but just as the first man was to be executed a Mexican maid rushed in front of him and pleaded for his life. Other Mexican girls joined in the plea for mercy and the Americans were spared."

Tax Collector After "Boozelets"

Liquor-Filled Confections Must Pay Internal Revenue Duty.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—If you are fond of "rum drops," those tasty little confections which are filled with rum wine, creme de menthe or other liquor, you had better get in a large supply.

Why?

Because the commissioner of internal revenue decided today that confectioners who sell such concoctions are dispensers of liquor and should pay the regular federal tax of $25 for the privilege.

Stabbed in Fight Over Young Woman

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Oct. 22.—Stanley Bill of Central Falls, R. I., is at the Memorial Hospital in Pawtucket in a critical condition from knife wounds received in a fight with Peter Kohonek. The argument started when both tried to accompany Antonia Sthik home from a dance.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets

That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking chances, or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment —clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way, when the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, away goes indigestion and stomach troubles.

If you have a bad taste in your mouth, tongue coated, appetite poor, lazy, don't-care feeling, or sudden headaches or dizziness after undigested food, you should take Olive Tablets, the substitutes for calomel.

Dr. Edward's Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief, as you can eat what you like. At 10c and 25c per box. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio.

MISS JESSIE WILSON, who places her Y. W. C. A. work before her wedding plans.

Jessie Wilson Puts 'Work' Before 'Man'

NEW YORK, Oct. 22 — Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, lectured today to members of the National Women's Christian Association on "The Girls of Our Nation and the World's."

She spoke in the home of Mrs. Willard Straight, in Waterbury, Ct. When she was asked if her devotion to the cause did not rob her of time for her wedding plans she said:

"Oh, yes, but this work interests me more than any man. My wedding is only a wedding, while this work represents the girls all over the land."

Rio Janeiro Host to Col. Roosevelt

Ex-President Sees City, but Longs for a Plunge in the Jungle.

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil, Oct. 22.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, former President of the United States, who is the guest of the Brazilian government, was today taken for an automobile ride through the city and later inspected the most important of the public buildings. The colonel expressed his pleasure at everything he saw, but could not hide his impatience to get into the untrodden jungles.

Germans to Seek New Trade Treaty

BERLIN, Oct. 22—Preliminary steps were taken today for the formation of a German-American Economic Association, devoted to the cultivation of the relations of the two countries in the fields of business and economic politics. The association, which is under the auspices of the Manufacturers' League of Exporters to America and of the great shipping companies, aims at commencing the preparatory work for a special German-American commercial treaty.

Port of Boston

The first importation of Tea was received through the Port of Boston early in the 18th Century. Tea has ever remained a Boston institution, its present import value placing it among the principal commodities at this port.

It is appropriate, therefore, that Golden Dome Teas should have originated at the Port of Boston so fittingly represent the high grade reputation of "Boston Quality."

The brand Golden Dome symbolizes a celebrated building that conspicuously stands forth above the multitude at the Port of Boston and in the esteem of its people.

LOVE TEST MAY END SEPARATION OF GWATHMEYS

NEW YORK, Oct. 22. A novel "trial separation," which it is hoped will lead to an ultimate reconciliation, is being tried by Millionaire Temple Gwathmey and his beautiful wife Mrs. Lelia Gwathmey, co-respondent in the sensational Bishop divorce case, according to a close friend of one of them.

Mr. Gwathmey, whose generous assertion, "I will stick by my wife, startled society leaders, it is said, that they will prove the panacea for any bitterness that may have arisen between himself and his wife over the disclosures that followed the public charge brought against Mrs. Gwathmey and James Cunningham Bishop, a wealthy banker by the latter's wife.

Mrs. Gwathmey is of the same belief. She has gone to Texas and is hopeful of a reconciliation with her husband on her return.

Walsh Speaks at Salem Tomorrow

One of the biggest Democratic rallies of the present campaign will be held at the Salem Rink tomorrow night. Among the speakers will be Lieutenant-Governor David I. Walsh, Edward P. Barry, James E. Donoghue, candidate for the Executive Council, Representative John G. Stevens and Representative James D. Binns of Salem.

"Boil Chestnuts," Is Doctor's Warning

ADMIRAL PLEADED FOR DOCTOR

Detective Condon Recites Mrs. Eaton's Story of Husband's Last Sickness.

was quoted as saying there were two insurance policies for $3,000 and an additional policy in the Naval Aid Society on the admiral's life, and as declaring the Eatons were $18,000 in debt when they moved to Assinippi.

Scott said Mrs. Harrison—Mrs. Eaton's mother—had said to her daughter:

"Jennie, don't talk too much. If you do, they will send you to Taunton."

Detective Scott said Mrs. Eaton had told him she had found two "poison tablets" in a pocket of the admiral's clothing.

Mrs. Bessie Bursey, the lodging-house keeper in Washington who testified yesterday, was recalled to the stand today at the request of the defence. She identified a letter she wrote Mrs. Eaton in which she said:

"Well, Mrs. Eaton, the whole world may think you guilty, but I will always think you innocent."

Dr. Charles H. Colgate of Rockland testified today that Mrs. Eaton had asked him "if there was not something she could use to quiet the admiral and which she could put in his tea and drinks." He said he had, at Mrs. Eaton's request, examined the admiral and had found him "mentally sound."

The doctor declared the admiral had said to him:

"Poison has crept into our little family."

All Eyes on Prisoner.

Women appeared in force today. Court officers had to turn away scores. Fair weather brought out an overflow crowd.

Mrs. Eaton appeared smiling and bright. As she walked to her chair, the women in the courtroom leaned forward and followed her closely as she walked with stately bearing to her chair.

The government began its closing day with the testimony of State Detective John H. Scott.

Just before he was sworn, counsel arranged for the listing of exhibits taken from the Eaton home, chiefly medicines taken from the bedroom of the admiral.

Mr. Katzmann requested that the arsenic in the small white pasteboard box, which, according to the testimony, was part of that taken from the admiral's stomach, be listed separately. This was agreed to.

To Assistant District Attorney Katzmann, who conducted the examination, Detective Scott told about his visit to the Eaton home in March 10 when he was asked to investigate the case by District Attorney Barker. Detective Condon was with him.

Q—Have any conversation with the defendant that evening? A.—I did. I told her that I was Mr. Scott of the State police and that Mr. Condon, the deputy sheriff, was with me. I told her we had come to inquire into the cause of the sudden death of the admiral. Mrs. Eaton said:

"I don't see the need of anything of this kind. The doctors have already said that the admiral died a natural death."

I told her it was the custom in cases of sudden death to make an inquiry. She said all right. She said she was eating her supper when we came and that she would finish it and join us later.

Witness then told the story of his interview with the prisoner, reading generously from his note book. He said:

"Mr. Eaton told me her husband was taken sick on Thursday; that he had eaten cold roast pork; that on Friday he was much worse; that he went to bed and remained there all day Friday and night. She said she went to bed herself Friday at about 8 o'clock, and was awakened by her mother calling, and that the admiral had also called.

"'I went into the room with Dorothy,' she told me, 'and I found him lying on the floor leaning against the bed.

"'The admiral said to me: "I feel so sick," or "I feel so weak." I can't recall which. We put him back into the bed. I lay down beside him. He went to sleep. I fell asleep. When I woke up, it was to find him dead.

Woke to Find Him Dead.

"I went into the room about 2:30 a. m. and it must have been 4 when I woke up to find him dead. I had one arm around him, and he had one arm over me. When I woke up I found him cold. He was dead. I called Dr. Frame at 5 o'clock.'

"Mrs. Eaton further told me the admiral had said to her: 'Oh, send for a doctor.' She said she told him she would. He said to her: 'Oh, I am so sick.'

"She told us that he was addicted to the use of liquor and other stimulants, such as opium and morphine, and that the admiral smoked opium in a pipe.

"I asked her if there was any life insurance. She said there were two policies in the Massachusetts Mutual for $3,000. She also said there was a policy in the Naval Aid Society.

"She said that when they came to Assinippi they were $18,000 in debt and had outstanding bills of $3,000 or $4,000.

"She said: 'Joe was taken sick Thursday afternoon. He went to bed early in the evening. He was quite sick all night. He could not take anything on his stomach. Friday, Dr. Frame came and treated him and saw mother also. He left medicine for the admiral to be taken every two hours.

"'I gave him the first dose in hot water. He threw it up as soon as he swallowed it. I gave him another dose later in water not quite so hot. He threw that up as soon as he had taken it. Then I took some milk. He could not stand that.'

Chief Justice Aiken—What day was that?

Detective Scott—That was her statement about Friday. She said:

"'The next dose with water I mixed a small pinch of soda. He did not leave his bed from Thursday. He was too weak.

"'Nobody gave him anything but Defence May Call June to Witness Stand in Behalf of Mother.

myself. Dorothy did not give him anything, nor did my mother.

"'I was in and out of his room all Thursday night and Friday.

"'After we had found that he had fallen out of bed, we lifted him in, Dorothy and I. I laid down beside him and he fell asleep. I also fell asleep. When I awoke I found his cold arm over me. I told Dorothy and mother. I called Dr. Frame.'

Q.—Was this statement made on March 10? A.—Yes, she made this statement on March 10, and repeated it on March 13. She told me the admiral had taken drugs. She said the admiral had drugs and poison in the house. I asked her if she had made any search for poison. She said she had, his room and his bed after he died, but found none. Condon and I then searched the admiral's room for one hour.

"Mrs. Eaton said at that time that she would hire a Sherlock Holmes or some noted detective. On March 17 she said she'd get a ferret to go through the house as she knew the admiral had poison hidden. On another occasion, Mrs. Eaton told of the admiral's financial transactions, how he had speculated in stocks and how, while living in Brookline, she had pawned her jewels to help the admiral out of his difficulties.

"She declared that the admiral was very peculiar—he was the kind of a man that would come to her with a necklace in one hand and poison in the other.

"On March 10, Mrs. Harrison was heard to say: 'Jennie, don't talk too much. If you do, they will send you to Taunton.'

"On March 11, Condon, Dorothy and I were in the admiral's room. June and her mother came in and Mrs. Eaton introduced her daughter. 'This is my daughter. Is she not beautiful? Is she not lovely? She is married.' Mrs. Eaton then kissed June several times and called her her mother's dear child.

"I visited the house on March 20, the morning that Mrs. Eaton was arrested. I asked her where she got the box which contained the soda she gave the admiral. She answered that she got it on the shelf in the pantry and pointed out the box.

Q.—Did you notice any man's clothing in the closet in the admiral's room? A.—I did, and also in the closet off the hall.

Q.—Did you search the clothing for poison? A.—Yes, and Mrs. Eaton helped us.

Q.—Did you find any poison? A.—No, but Mrs. Eaton said she found poison. She showed two pills she had taken out of one of the pockets. These she turned over to me and later I gave them to Dr. Whitney.

Q.—Did you notice a typewriter in the house? A.—I did.

Q.—Where was it? A.—In front of the window by the stairway.

Q.—Was there anything on it? A.—Yes, a piece of paper.

Q.—What was the date? A.—The morning of March 11.

Q.—What did the paper contain?

Attorney Morse—I object.

Judge Aiken allowed the inquiry as to the substance of the paper, but saved an exception for the defence.

Q.—State what was on the paper? A.—It was the will of Mrs. Jennie M. Eaton, bequeathing all of her property to her daughter, June.

Q.—Did it bear a date? A.—I cannot tell.

Attorney Morse—I ask that the entire question be stricken out.

After some discussion Judge Aiken ruled that the statement "It was the will of Mrs. Eaton's" be ruled out as it was an inference on the part of the witness.

"The witness should state what were the contents," said Judge Aiken.

Attorney Katzmann—I ask you to repeat as nearly as you can remember, what was on that paper? A.—Mrs. Jennie M. Eaton bequeathed all her property to her daughter, June.

Q.—You were in the Eaton home on March 12, the day of the funeral? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you have any conversation with Mrs. Eaton? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was it? A.—She said: "I wish, Mr. Scott, you had gone with me to protect me this morning to Lowell. The newspaper men and photographers bothered me terribly." And she cried then.

Q.—What else did she say, Mr. Scott? A.—She said, "I'm mad, now."

Q.—Who was with you in the house at that time? A.—Deputy Sheriff Condon.

Q.—Mr. Scott, have you searched at any time the house and premises at Assinippi? A.—Yes, we searched in all about eleven hours—six hours in one day.

Q.—Was Mrs. Eaton present at the searching? A.—Yes, some of the time.

Q.—How did she appear?

Objected to by Mr. Morse, but admitted by the court.

A.—Considerably excited.

Q.—What did she do? A.—She kept opening bureau drawers.

Q.—Did she remove anything from these drawers? A.—Yes, she kept taking things out and saying, "Here is something! Here is something now!"

Q.—What else did she do while you were there? She almost tipped over the casket with the body of Admiral Eaton, and finally Mr. Condon had to lead her away.

Detective Scott was then cross-examined by Mr. Morse.

Q.—You had no trouble, Mr. Scott, in having the defendant answer your questions? A.—No, sir.

Q.—She didn't try to conceal anything, apparently? A.—I should say not.

Q.—You testified that on March 11 you saw a piece of paper in the typewriter, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see this typewriter on March 10? A.—I don't know whether it was there or not. I didn't see it.

Q.—On this piece of paper there were ten or twelve lines, as best you can remember, in which she made bequests to June? A.—Yes.

Q.—On March 17, Mr. Scott, you testi- it on March 17? A.—No, it was while it sir.

Q.—Did you ask for it? A.—No.

Q.—You were the investigator on this case, weren't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And you decided through some mental process or a suggestion from somebody that you might want that paper? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why didn't you ask for it? A.—Well, I was satisfied that I wouldn't get it if I asked for it.

Q.—What made you think you wouldn't get it if you asked for it? A.—I had had some talk with Dorothy about it.

Q.—Did you talk with Dorothy about it on March 17? A. No, it was while it was in the typewriter on March 11.

Q.—Now, Mr. Scott, it was an uncompleted paper with no signature upon it, wasn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—You, Mr. Scott, have searched for the purchase of poisons or drugs? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Who has searched with you in various places? A.—State Officer Sherlock and Deputy Sheriff Condon.

Q.—Where have you searched? A.—Medford, Malden, Whitman, Rockland, Brockton, Boston, Georgetown and Alexandria, Va.

Q.—And you yourself Mr. Scott, have not found that Mrs. Eaton had obtained poison? A.—I have not.

Re-direct examination by Mr. Katzmann:

Q.—When you searched the drug stores, did you look for sales under any other name besides that of Eaton?

Attorney Morse—I object.

Chief Justice Aiken—Mr. Witness, did you search for sales under any other name besides that of Mrs. Eaton? A.—I did.

Mr. Katzmann—How many other names did you look for sales under? A.—Three, besides Mrs. Eaton.

Recross-examination by Mr. Morse:

Q.—Under what names did you look? A.—Under the names of Ainsworth, Keyes, Wallingford and Eaton.

Q.—And you had the same result in all instances? A.—Yes.

Q.—You found no record? A.—No.

Q.—Did you look under the name of the admiral? A.—Yes, under the name of Eaton—under any Eaton.

Landlady Called Again.

At this point Mrs. Bessie Bursey, the lodging house keeper in Washington, where Mrs. Eaton and June lodged before and after the birth of June's baby, was recalled. She was asked by Mr. Morse to identify a letter. She was recalled at the request of the defence. Mrs. Bursey identified the enclosure as one written by her and the envelope as one addressed to Mrs. Eaton for her by a friend named Mrs. Burke in Washington.

DOROTHY (AINSWORTH) EATON, younger daughter of woman accused of killing Admiral Eaton. This is one of her latest pictures.

ANGELA MORGAN ON EATON TRIAL WOMEN

By ANGELA MORGAN.

The women arrayed against Mrs. Eaton—What an absorbing study they are! How quaintly and interestingly they stand out against the background of this strange death trial, what splashes of color they make in the grim painting of a woman fighting for her life!

This was the striking impression made upon me in the court room, where Jennie May Eaton is being tried for the alleged poisoning of her husband, Admiral Joseph Giles Eaton.

It was distinctly woman's day at the famous trial. Women predominated in the audience, women figured prominently as witnesses, and women occupied the centre of interest in the evidence as brought forth by the prosecution.

As witness after witness took the stand to testify for the government—women neighbors of the Eatons, women housekeepers, women shopkeepers, cooks, bakery girls, and so on down the list—I looked again and again at the prisoner and wondered how she could endure the ordeal.

Here were persons who had figured—many of them—in the most intimate scenes of the Eaton household. Persons who told of those family secrets and peculiarities which any sensitive woman would shrink to have revealed to strangers.

Here testimony that laid bare all the little personal happenings and daily events—the breakfast table scenes, the conversations at shop and bakeries where provisions were purchased. Here was testimony that probed deep into the very heart of the family troubles, the family habits and peculiarities.

Mrs. Eaton Removes Hat.

Nothing was hidden. Alleged conversations that made shocking allusions were repeated word for word; stories were related of Mrs. Eaton herself that would have prostrated most women with their intimate details, given in a public courtroom.

Mrs. Burey, keeper of a rooming house in Washington, laid bare secrets concerning the visit of Mrs. Eaton and June to her home when the latter's baby girl was born. She told of Mrs. Eaton's alleged reference to an admirer of her own—a wealthy man out in Chicago, who "owned blocks of real estate" and who "would leave her all he had when he died."

Through all of this astonishing revelation, this baffling woman sat apparently as cheerful as ever, except for an occasional bending of her body forward when she wanted to hear more distinctly.

I watched her, marvelling more and more. Was it possible she did not feel the sting of this public arraignment, this airing of her private affairs where strange ears could hear, and where the morbid-minded could gloat over her alleged erratic career?

Was it possible she did not care?

I repeatedly asked myself this question, as I studied her indifferent manner, her frequent smiles, her occasional laughter. For she did laugh, openly, a laugh that revealed her even white teeth and flushed her face to the brows.

Mrs. Eaton was shown to the courthouse in an entirely new guise, when she removed the hat which up to the present she had constantly worn. For the first time, she revealed her well shaped head, with its luxuriant brown hair, becomingly touched grey at the front. This wisp of grey made a "feather" of fluffy silver in her pompadour and added greatly to her appearance.

Cough Attacks Mrs. Eaton.

For the first time since the trial began, Mrs. Eaton showed the strain of the ordeal in the cough which attacked her at frequent intervals, once almost choking her until a court officer brought water to her relief. She took white lozenges from her hand bag—cough candy of some kind—and ate the wafers during court proceedings.

Meanwhile, in the audience, there was a great flutter of interest among the women in every detail of the scene, and in every movement of the woman sitting with her back to them in her graceful black silk gown.

The glorious sunshine had brought the women out in full force and a veritable garden of hats bobbed and waved at the back of the room, where the audience is obliged to sit, craning its necks and straining its ears to hear testimony so many yards away.

What a variegated assortment of hats!

Big hats, little hats, freak hats, impossible hats—hats that were "screams" in their ludicrous attempt at style, hats that were "dreams" in their attractive arrangement of color, all sorts and conditions of hats!

One woman, who held a lorgnette throughout the proceedings, wore a theatre hat with a heliotrope satin crown and cream colored brim. She was dressed as for a matinee.

Indeed, that is what the whole performance seemed today, to the casual observer—a social affair or a matinee. When recess came, and the plumes waived and the aigrettes nodded, it needed only the clink of tea cups and the passing of cake-filled plates to complete the effect of a social tea.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your Kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

A HAPPY CHILD IN A FEW HOURS

When cross, constipated, feverish, give "California Syrup of Figs."

Mothers can rest easy after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it cannot cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

In the American's Picture Puzzle Contest

Are you looking for some easy money?

Right here, and now, the Boston AMERICAN offers you an opportunity to get it. And it does not require any work, no soliciting, no effort of any kind except a little daily, mental exercise. Can you tell what poet the picture published with this announcement represents?

You don't have to be familiar with the names of poets in order to solve this picture. The AMERICAN furnishes all of the necessary information to aid you in your task. Examine this picture closely. If you can't tell at once what poet it represents, send for a copy of the guide list of poet's names, which appeared in last Sunday's AMERICAN. With the aid of this list, you cannot go astray, for somewhere among the 300 names printed there, you will find the correct answer to the picture.

If you are just entering this contest, all of the back pictures may be obtained as well as those answer lists which have already appeared in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Equipped with this information, your opportunities are identical with those who started with the first picture.

Rewards are great—FOUR THOUSAND DOLLARS in cash is not to be overlooked.

Someone will be ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS richer as a result of taking part in this competition, others will be richer in the sums of $800, $500, $250, $150, $125, $100, $75 and so on down to the smaller cash awards.

Don't let "the other fellow" walk away with this easy money.

Make your own intelligence produce this ONE THOUSAND DOLLAR bag of gold for you.

Send for the back pictures and back answer lists and get in the game today, NOW.

You will enjoy the fun of solving the pictures to say nothing of the big cash goal to strive for.

Each day for 85 days (commencing Sunday, Sept. 21) the Boston AMERICAN will print a puzzle picture representing authors and their books, poets, plays, proverbs, battles, universities, inventors, actors, books, cities, buildings and public men and women. $4,000 in cash prizes will be awarded to the 155 competitors who secure the largest number of correct answers according to the rules of the contest which appear each week in the Sunday AMERICAN.

Lack of familiarity with the subjects used need bar no one from competing because there will be printed each week in the Sunday AMERICAN an official list of names or titles, among which will be found the CORRECT answers to the pictures to be used during the week commencing with this Sunday list publication.

That's all there is to it—there is no book to buy, or other expenses of any kind necessary.

All you have to do is to purchase the Daily and Sunday AMERICAN as each issue appears.

SPECIAL NOTICE

For the convenience of those who may miss or have missed any of the regular issues, all back puzzle pictures and weekly answer lists may be obtained at the regular price of the paper in which said pictures or answer lists appeared, viz., one cent for each daily back picture and five cents for each Sunday back picture or answer list.

Manuel's Bride Goes with Husband

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—Princess Augustine Victoria of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen, the bride of ex-King Manuel of Portugal, who has been ill in a hospital at Munich since about a week after her marriage, was well enough to leave that place and started with her husband for her father's castle at Sigmaringen. The physicians in a new bulletin stated that her ill-health was due exclusively to the presence of intestinal bacteria.

When Your Appetite Comes Back to You

It Is a Sure Sign Your Stomach Is Able to Work. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Will Give You a Rousing Appetite.

It is the greatest joy in the world to be able to eat what one wants, and no misery can compare with that which comes when an appetite fails.

When the stomach cannot digest food the system revolts at the very idea of eating, but when the digestive apparatus is restored to its normal condition every quality of mind seems to make a man cheerful.

"That's the Way I Used to Look. What's you think of me now?"

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets mix with the food you eat. The stomach by its peristaltic action churns and moves the food around the stomach walls, the powerful ingredients in these tablets instantly begin digesting the food as they are forced through it and around it.

These tablets regulate the strength of gastric juices. If there is too much acid or alkali, then Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets reduce or dilute these evil conditions, and prevent the irritating and raw stomachs which always come with dyspepsia, indigestion, etc.

It is the very essence of pleasure to a stomach sufferer to know that he can digest any meal if he will only take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating.

The use of one of these tablets after meals will in a very short time restore your appetite to its normal condition, and you will be able to enjoy your food with an old-time relish.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Price 50 cents.

MRS. SULZER TO TAKE STUMP FOR OUSTED LEADER

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mrs. William Sulzer, wife of the impeached Governor of New York, is going to take the stump for her husband. She will be a regular Sulzer "spellbinder" throughout the campaign in the Sixth Assembly District where Mr. Sulzer has been nominated for the Assembly by the Progressives. Bull Moose leaders expect that Mrs. Sulzer's voice will influence many voters to cast their ballots for the ousted Governor. Mr. and Mrs. Sulzer, who made a triumphal entry into New York from Albany last night were at the Broadway Central Hotel today, where scores of friends of the former Governor called to pay their respects and congratulate the Governor on the fight he made in Albany. Most of them were from the district which Mr. Sulzer represented for so many years in public life.

"I am glad to be among my friends once more," said Mr. Sulzer with evident traces of emotion. "My loyal wife whom I have to thank for so much, is going to help me, and I am confident that we shall win. When things looked blackest at Albany her advice to me was: 'Will, fight, fight!' That is still her advice."

Political leaders see a significant feature in Mrs. Sulzer's part in the campaign. Not only is she the first woman to go actively into a campaign against Tammany Hall, but she represents a Bull Moose candidate and the Bull Moose party has formally gone on record in favor of woman suffrage.

Bispham to Give a New Program

In response to many requests David Bispham has arranged to present at B. F. Keith's Theatre a new program of operatic selections today and tomorrow. This new program will include "O, Ruddier Than the Cherry" from "Acis and Galatea," by Handel; "When Two That Love Are Parted," by Secchi; "When I Was a Page," from "Falstaff," by Verdi, and "The Two Grenadiers," by Schumann. Mr. Bispham will continue to present "Danny Deever." Mr. Bispham will on Friday and Saturday sing Schubert's "Wanderer" and "Erl King," and recite Edgar Allen Poe's "The Raven," with music by Arthur Bergh.

Grand Jury Calls Mitchel.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The Grand Jury has drafted a letter requesting John Purroy Mitchel, Fusionist candidate for Mayor, to appear and tell what he knows about the alleged colonization of voters by Tammany leaders.

Well, Politics Has One Use; You Can Talk About It!

One of the loudest Gardner men was proselytizing over in Cambridge last night, and in one quarter met a decidedly bored reception.

"Say, what's the matter with you?" he demanded angrily at last. "I tell you Gardner is going to be the next Governor. Don't you believe it?"

"Well," said the weary listener, "I don't exactly believe it, and I don't exactly disbelieve it. I just don't care."

* * *

One of the peculiarities of the present fight for the State Senate is that in almost every district where one of the present Senators is running for re-election, it is a foregone conclusion either that he will win, or that he will lose. In few cases is there any doubt about the issue.

* * *

Out in Charley McCarthy's Fifth Middlesex District, for instance, out of fourteen voters questioned, not one knew the name of McCarthy's opponent.

* * *

Senator Bellamy of the First Bristol District is another sure winner.

* * *

Senator Walter McLane of Fall River, however, is distinctly something else again.

* * *

A Northboro man tried to interest President Wilson in a new Spavin cure, which is a sort of horse on the President.

* * *

Some political sharps who were ready to back Gardner to the limit before his attempted "wallop" at Bird Saturday night are so disgusted with his weak showing that they make no secret of their feelings. One of them said scornfully:

"Wallop! Huh! Why Gardner couldn't lick Bat Nelson!"

* * *

Christopher Callahan of Holyoke got nominated for District Attorney at an expenditure of six cents. Mr. Benton did NOT get nominated for Governor, and it cost him eleven thousand dollars. There's one born every minute.

* * *

Edward Emmett McGrath is out for Congress. He is an eloquent and able gentleman and should be able to give a good account of himself in Washington.

* * *

Senator Root's feeling toward "My People" will get a rude shock when he submits himself to popular vote for re-election.

* * *

Judge Charles M. Bruce of Malden says: "Governor Foss has got to win." Well, what of it?

* * *

"I esteem Mr. Gardner as an upright efficient legislator, a student of economic problems, and a citizen," says Governor Foss, as a prize-fighter always shakes hands with his opponent. Then Mr. Foss proceeds to give Mr. Gardner a "wallop" by adding: "But I confess to disappointment at the quibbles Mr. Gardner raises while he shuts his eyes to the serious issues of the moment."

* * *

David Walsh wants a non-partisan constitutional convention. But personally we're agin any constitutions.

* * *

Mr. Bird's voice has held out so well on his whirlwind tour that he is thinking of learning "Sweet Adeline" and running for Mayor.

* * *

Nicholas Murray Butler says the Republican party will not sanction "political lynching." But the Grand Old Bunch is not so strongly opposed to political suicide, we observe.

* * *

"Who's with me? The people, my boy," says the Governor. And Tom Riley breaks two teeth in his rage.

* * *

Francis X. Quigley refused to run for re-election to the Senate, but his appointment as Assistant Appraiser of Merchandise in Boston makes it obvious that Mr. Quigley looked before he leaped.

* * *

We observe that the industry of becoming ambassador is still popular with college professors.

TESTIMONY OF 2 FOR "DAKOTA" CALLED FALSE

Two witnesses for "Dakota Dan" are mentioned in Master Pevey's forthcoming report as giving false testimony to support his claim to being the long-lost son of Senator Russell of Melrose, according to a well defined report today. The master's findings on the case, which will be filed Tuesday, are understood to give the names of the accused witnesses.

One witness is declared to be a Bostonian, and the other to live in Melrose.

District Attorney Higgins of Middlesex County, when asked what his attitude would be in the event of Master Pevey's report declaring anyone had given perjured testimony, said:

"If I become convinced that perjury was committed I shall take steps toward the prosecution of the offender. But before deciding my course in the matter I shall first read carefully the entire evidence of the hearing before Master Pevey.

"If there are indications of perjury I shall make a personal investigation. Of course, it is liable that a person may give untruthful testimony without realizing that the statements made are not true. If, after an investigation, I feel that the facts warrant prosecution I shall immediately take such action. I have had no conference with Master Pevey."

Even Money on Gotham Election

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Betting on the election in the financial district is now at even money, with more real money in sight. Fred Schumm, who has placed several large election bets, announced that he had $5,000 to bet on Mitchel, but that it was untaken as yet.

Curb brokers have started a Wall Street McCall League to offset the Mitchel League. Vincent Astor has accepted the chairmanship of the Mitchel League finance committee.

Girl Typist New World's Champion

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Margaret Bowen is today acclaimed as the new world's champion typist, following her winning the Thousand Dollar Silver Trophy Cup at the Annual Business Show in New York, running a typewriter at the rate of 125 net words a minute. She succeeds Florence E. Wilson, who typed 117 words a minute.

Woman Happy Freed on Slaying Charge

Mrs. McKenna, Providence Housekeeper, Acquitted by Jury.

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 22.—Catherine McKenna, the young woman acquitted by a jury in the Superior Court on the charge of slaying James Dunn, was kept very busy today receiving the congratulations from friends. "I knew that everything would come out right and that I would be vindicated. I am naturally overjoyed," was the only comment she would make today at the home of her parents, where a happy reunion took place.

Mrs. McKenna was tried for the killing of Dunn, who was a brakeman on the New Haven road. She was his housekeeper. The State claimed she hurled a lamp at Dunn during a quarrel and that Dunn burned to death.

Censor Gaby Deslys Play in London

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The playlet, "A la Carte," in which Gaby Deslys is appearing here, has been censored. West End clergymen wrote a letter to the [illegible] with suggestiveness and indecent actions." The Lord Chamberlain notified Lord Chamberlain saying the act [illegible] the management to revise the playlet.

GIVES FORTUNE TO FACTORY FIRE VICTIMS

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—After paying every creditor dollar for dollar and dividing the remainder of his fortune for the families of the thirty girls killed in the burning of his clothing factory in Binghamton, N. Y., Fred B. Freeman announced yesterday that at the age of sixty-six years he was starting life anew.

"When I went to my clothing factory in Binghamton the morning of the fire," said Mr. Freeman in his little furnished room in Walnut street, South, East Orange, yesterday, "I was worth probably $3,000,000. The world certainly looked fair to me then.

"A few hours later I saw thirty of my employes killed and my fortune swept away. As I saw the flames lick up my property and saw the thirty bodies spread before me in the morgue I resolved that I would use every dollar I possessed for the benefit of those besides myself who had suffered.

"It is a scene I do not wish to recall, but God knows I have done everything I could. For the benefit of those poor girls' families I have made paupers of my own family.

"I haven't a dollar today, but I have lots of good friends. Tomorrow I start out as a clothing salesman in New York city, and with my first commissions I will send to Binghamton for my wife and our daughter, who is nine years old.

"When I signed a check yesterday for payment of the last claim against me there was a wonderful feeling of relief. All that is past now. There is a clean slate and I start out as a new man. My sixty-six years will be no handicap to me. I feel like twenty-six."

U. S. to Take Phones Over Inside 2 Years

Federal Telegraph, Too, Will Come, Says Lewis.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland, the House father of parcel post, in a speech before the national convention of second and third class postmasters, predicted that in the next two years Congress would authorize the Postoffice Department to take over the gigantic telephone monopoly of the country, capitalized at $1,000,000,000, and operate it as a part of the Federal postal system.

Gunmen "Shoot Up" Cabaret Show

One Man Killed in War of Rival New York Gangs.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—One man was killed and a hundred persons were thrown into panic when six gunmen early today shot up a cabaret show at No. 147 Eighth avenue. Patrick Rielly, the dead man, fell with a bullet in his head at the first volley and died a short time later.

The police declare that the shooting was the result of warfare between two rival bands, the "gophers" and the "Hudson dusters." Ten persons were arrested.

Two Arrested in Cuban Army Plot

HAVANA, Oct. 22.—A military plot against the Cuban government has been discovered. Colonel Pujol, commander of the barracks at Matanzas, today ordered the arrest of two retired army captains on the charge that they were conspiring against the public peace.

OYSTER MEN FOR PURE FOOD, SAYS CASSIDY

This is "Oyster Week" throughout the country. Everything possible is being done to promote interest in and demand for the oyster. The oyster business has had to bear a lot of adverse criticism which it has not deserved. Today the "succulent bivalve" is coming into its own. Mr. Cassidy tells you today how the dealers are doing everything possible to assure the public a pure supply of oysters.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

I want to commend for your consideration today the oyster. Too much unfavorable criticism of this delicious sea food has been going the rounds. I want to dispel some of these popular fallacies.

You have read much of oyster beds polluted by sewerage from the cities. And how the oyster has been blamed for the spread of disease. Conditions are changed.

These conditions, wherever they existed in times past are happily relegated to antiquity. Through the energy, enthusiasm and intelligence of the Oyster Growers' and Dealers' Association of North America, the oyster supply is today essentially pure.

The work this association is doing is to be commended. Anyone of its more than 3,000 members scattered from Florida to Cape Cod must do order to the public a pure oyster. Failure to do so means his supply is stopped and his business ruined.

Inspector Tours Coast.

The association employs a man who travels on tours of inspection all along the Atlantic coast maintaining methods of cultivation and distribution which meet the most rigid requirements of health inspection.

During recent years many hundreds of thousands of dollars have been expended and sacrificed by the oyster growers and shippers in abandoning places in rivers and harbors which were considered doubtful as to purity where oysters had been planted, and in the installation of sterilizing and refrigerating plants, in improved shipping houses, in improved packages, in the use of artificial ice, etc.

Floating oysters in unsuitable places is condemned by all intelligent oyster growers, and they would as promptly object to such an abuse as would respectable milk dealers object to the watering of milk.

Whatever may be the conflicting claim of experts, it is a significant fact that in those localities, where oysters constitute a very large portion of the diet of the people, the public health is remarkably good.

Keep Product Pure.

Still, more, those engaged in the oyster industry and who know all about the facts eat freely of oysters, both raw and cooked, and provide them for their families. They not only eat their own product at home, but they eat oysters at hotels, restaurants and on dining cars, without knowing whence they come. The same cannot be said of some bakers confessed with the methods employed in many bake shops.

Just a little testimony from the inside. I have before me a circular issued by the association to the dealers, which is signed by the president, Henry C. Rowe, of Groton, Ct., in laying down the presidency. Mr. Rowe writes: "I urge you to continue the work which has been so successfully established. I URGE EVERY SHIPPER OF OYSTERS AND EVERY DEALER TO CONTINUE TO TAKE EVERY POSSIBLE PRECAUTION TO KEEP OUR PRODUCT IN THE HIGHEST DEGREE PURE AND WHOLESOME."

This is the spirit which permeates the oyster dealers. We in New England, and especially in Boston, are fortunate in the character of the men engaged in supplying oysters for the table.

And what is more delicious than a juicy Wellfleet or Blue Point or one of the many other kinds, permeated with that indescribable relish which comes of the sea. Other articles of food have increased enormously in price. But the oyster, whether "stew, raw or fried," remains at about the same price.

Prices Stay Reasonable.

It strikes me that here is an answer to the excuses offered by so many dealers in food products for increased prices. Despite the advance of pure food demands, increased cost of labor, transportation and rentals, the oyster men still continue to supply us with their succulent product at reasonable prices. And they, no more than any other class of business men, are in business entirely for their health.

Let's give the oyster the right of way on the table this week. It is not a mere delicacy, but a nutritious and real food. It is today a moderate priced addition to the larder. Long live the oyster.

FOSS DRAWS "DEADLY PARALLEL" ON RIVALS

The third of the series of political articles by Governor Eugene N. Foss, being published in the AMERICAN, is as follows:

The three machine platforms in this State election (Democratic, Republican, Progressive) are almost entirely borrowed from the policies of Governor Foss. Prove it by reading for yourself the following "deadly parallels." But no one of these three platforms includes all the important popular issues which Governor Foss has raised. They all three fall behind the Governor. Isn't it better to elect the man you know will carry on all this good work? Why experiment?

ATTENTION: PROGRESSIVES!

PROGRESSIVE PLATFORM ENDORSES GOVERNOR FOSS.

"We seek to destroy the alliance between corrupt business and corrupt politics and to tear down the invisible government which disposes of the authority of the State for the selfish interests of a favored few. We denounce the two old parties as the instruments of the alliance."

"We denounce the Democratic Party in this State for the shameful violation of its written pledge not to support the monopolistic schemes of the New Haven Railroad."

"We denounce the Republican Party for its breach of faith with the women of the State by refusing to submit the question of women suffrage to the people and for its shifty failure to provide for the nomination of candidates for the United States Senate by the direct primary. The Progressive Party has had bills introduced into the Massachusetts Legislature to perfect the direct primary and extend its operation to the nomination of United States Senators."

"We repeat our pledge that, if charged with the power in this State, we will establish the rights of the people on the surebasis of the initiative, the referendum, the recall."

"We denounce the present system of party enrollment as a fraud upon the independent voter. We demand its repeal."

"We will conduct the affairs of the Commonwealth as the best businesses are carried on."

"We demand that the Executive branch of our State government be reformed in order that a Governor may be Governor in fact."

"We demand the abolition of superfluous commissions and consolidation of executive power."

"All appointments should be based on merit and fitness."

"We pledge ourselves to extend the civil service system to all State and county administrative offices."

"We demand the adoption of a budget system."

"We denounce the present system of taxation."

"We demand immediate legislation to improve the relation between capital and labor." "We renew our demand for laws to promote the welfare of working women and children. We demand the recognition of the labor problem as a National problem."

"We renew our demand for stringent pure food laws."

"We demand the extension of homestead development."

"We demand also that the immigration department of the State shall assist immigrants who desire to live in our Commonwealth."

"We demand a thorough reform in the present prison system of the State, the separation of the different classes of prisoners, a permanent board to sit upon the questions of parole and pardons."

"We demand that justice should be done to persons who suffer from false arrest and imprisonment."

We demand "that the workingmen's compensation act should be amended so that the waiting period before receiving benefit shall be relieved (reduced?)"

"We believe that labor legislation, as far as possible, should be uniform throughout the United States."

"Forest lands must be restored, marsh lands must be drained," etc.

"We denounce the wrongs done to the people by the Democratic and Republican Parties in dealing with the New Haven Railroad monopoly. Recognizing the right of the railroad stockholders to a reasonable rate upon their legitimate investments, we believe that the first duty of a railroad is to serve the public and that the State should exercise such control over the railroads within the State as will compel the performance of that duty."

"We demand full explanation of past, present and future expenditures for publicity and legislative expenses by Massachusetts railroads and other public service corporations."

"We declare for an immediate downward revision of the unjust schedules of the tariff—the present Democratic Administration has undertaken to revise the tariff downward but has unwisely declined to adopt progressive methods of treating tariff problems."

"We demand the enactment of laws to exclude from interstate commerce the products of underpaid convict labor and the labor of children."

WHERE GOVERNOR FOSS STANDS.

Governor Foss has gone further than this. He has no machine whatever backing him.

Governor Foss vetoed the railroad legislation as drafted by the New Haven monopoly and when the Democratic and other party leaders enacted this legislation over his veto, he denounced them. Only three of the Progressives in the Legislature voted to sustain the Governor's position.

Governor Foss publicly called for the submission of equal suffrage to the voters in his inaugural message of 1912 and has on six occasions demanded from the Massachusetts Legislature the direct nomination of Senators. The direct election of United States Senators has now become a provision of the United States Constitution, and their popular nomination at State primaries is now required by the State election laws.

Governor Foss demanded all three of these measures in his first inaugural address to the 1911 Legislature. He calls upon all Progressives to support him on this issue.

Governor Foss has called for the abolition of the party enrollment in his addresses ever since he became Governor, notably in his message to the Legislature on April 30, 1913. The Progressives can help him get these measures enacted.

Governor Foss has given the State, for three years, a business administration and has secured the creation of a Commission on Economy and Efficiency to expose and check extravagance in public expenditures.

Governor Foss has persistently advocated that the Executive Council should be abolished, notably in his message to the Legislature on May 18, 1912, in order that the Governor might be directly responsible to the people for all appointments.

Governor Foss is fighting for the same issue.

Governor Foss submits his record of appointments on this basis.

Governor Foss has demanded that the county administrations give way to the State administration and that the county jails and institutions be turned over to the Commonwealth.

Governor Foss, through his Commission on Economy and Efficiency, is already working out an intelligent co-ordination of public expenses.

Governor Foss has already secured one important constitutional amendment on taxation, and calls upon the Progressives to help him in enforcing his demands for a more equitable assessment of taxes throughout the State.

Governor Foss submits to the voters of the Progressive Party his stand on financial monopoly and the remarkable record of his labor legislation.

Governor Foss has signed more pure food laws than were ever before enacted under any Governor.

Governor Foss has appointed a Homestead Commission and has called upon the cities and larger towns of the Commonwealth to obey the law which he signed requiring them to create similar commissions.

Governor Foss has already advocated and secured legislation favoring the better education and assistance of immigrants residing in Massachusetts.

All of these measures which Governor Foss has demanded, are now provided for by laws which he has signed. The prison system is under a new administration, buildings are being provided for the better classification of prisoners, and a permanent board has been created, at the demand of Governor Foss, for sitting upon all cases of parole and advising the Governor and Council upon applications for pardon.

Governor Foss demanded this reform in his first inaugural address to the Massachusetts Legislature (1911); secured it by law and signed the Legislative Act on June 22, 1911.

Governor Foss secured the enactment of the Workingmen's Compensation Act and has personally led in the effort to strengthen and broaden it.

Governor Foss has not only advocated uniform legislation on all subjects effecting the public welfare (especially labor laws), but has carried his arguments into the annual conference of Governors and is working to secure this result.

Governor Foss has saved the forest lands from unjust taxation and secured appropriations of many millions for draining, dredging and otherwise improving the watersheds and waterways of the Commonwealth.

Everybody knows that this is a splendid description and endorsement of what Governor Foss has been doing and is doing today. No denunciation of New England railroad monopoly by New York interests could be more effective than the Governor's repeated messages and vetoes coupled with his present campaign before the people for re-election on the railroad issue.

Governor Foss not only demands this, but has pledged the Public Service Commission to make this investigation and secured the co-operation of the President of the New Haven Railroad to the effect that every penny of such expenditures shall be freely laid before the public authorities.

This statement is practically a stenographic report of Governor Foss' public utterances. Moreover, Governor Foss secured from the Massachusetts Legislature a memorial to Congress in favor of tariff reciprocity, with the result that the present tariff bill (approved October 3d), contains a reciprocity clause which will prove important if respected by the Congress.

Governor Foss has attacked our own prison contract system and has demanded that the prisoners be kept at profitable labor; their wages to be turned over to their destitute families; also that the products of prison industries be utilized in the institutions of the State, county, town and city governments and not placed upon the open market to compete with free labor. As to the labor of children, Governor Foss submits his own record of legislation accomplished for the protection of women and children.

These twenty-seven measures taken from the Progressive platform, comprise the great bulk of that party's program. Through the courtesy of the AMERICAN I shall hope to show in the same way, in following issues in this paper, the manner in which both the Republican and Democratic platforms have been largely copied from the policies which I have established and for which I am known to be working today.

(Signed) EUGENE N. FOSS.

Militancy Not in American Plans

"Violence has no place in the program mapped out by the women of this country who are striving to get equal suffrage," declared Mrs. La Follette, wife of the Senator. She lectures tonight before the Boston Equal Suffrage Association.

D. D. D. Opens New Era in Cure of Skin Diseases

Professor Budlong's case of eczema was known to almost every hospital and physician of reputation throughout the State of Connecticut. His letter is another interesting demonstration of what is being accomplished by the famous specific D. D. D. Prescription. "It may be of interest to you to know that your life-giving preparation, D. D. D. Prescription, has been of incalculable value to me. I was covered with eczema from head to foot when I began using your remedies. I could get no relief, although I tried a thousand means. I applied two bottles of the Prescription; a cure was effected in a very short time, in less than a month."—Prof. C. J. Budlong, South Lyme, Conn.

Ask any druggist today for D. D. D. Prescription. He'll tell you it allays the itch instantly—and soon there are signs of cure.

For 15 years it has been regarded as the specific for skin troubles of all kinds. Ask your druggist today about D. D. D. Prescription, also about D. D. D. soap, especially for tender skins.

The D. D. D. Laboratories authorize every druggist to offer the first full size bottle on the guarantee that unless it stops the itch at once your money will be refunded.

STOCK MARKET AND FINANCIAL NEWS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks weakened in early trading today but the movement was not regarded as indicating any definite trend. The substantial advances of yesterday were calculated to increase the supply, and the buying movement of the day before was not continued. Another factor was the great diminution of the short interest which had taken place.

In Boston at the end of an hour New Haven was off a point but not as weak as in New York, where it had declined 1¾. The drop was due, no doubt, to the threats of Former Governor Bulkeley of Connecticut to take in court his opposition to the latest bond issue by the road. Among mines, Granby was about the weakest here, declining 1. Butte & Superior was off ⅞ and a number of coppers showed fractional losses. Boston Elevated and United Fruit had advanced a half-point each and American Telephone was ⅜ lower.

At that time in New York losses included Canadian Pacific 1¼, Southern Pacific ⅝, Union Pacific ¾, Reading ⅞, American Can ¾, Steel ⅝, Amalgamated ¾ and St. Paul ⅝.

More Stock and Lower Prices.

When the New York market opened the offerings of stock were sufficient to lower prices. While prices went down the range was not much lower. There was profit taking on a large scale. American stocks had wavered in the London market before New York opened and arbitrage brokers on this side offered leading issues at concessions. Steel began a little lower as did several other stocks which closed yesterday with big gains. Canadian Pacific was the weakest of active issues.

When the trading broadened in London Americans made a better showing there.

Overstayed the Market.

The advance in stocks yesterday is attributed mostly to the extent of the short interest. Sentiment had become so pessimistic that a reaction was, it appears, inevitable and, as is always the case, a large number of traders overstayed and were caught when the supply of stocks gave out. Real liquidation ended last week, it would seem, and when bears failed to dislodge any stocks of consequence after repeated and desperate drives a rally was inevitable.

Foreign buying was a factor and more important still was the impression that big banking interests are now ready to lend the stock market some support, being of the opinion that whatever currency bill is passed it will not be so inimical to them as they have feared. The money market showed an easier tendency and sterling exchange declined. The freight decision was a strong bull influence.

About two-thirds of all the trading in the New York market was in Steel, Reading, Union Pacific, Amalgamated, Canadian Pacific and American Can. Business in Steel represented more than twenty-five per cent. of the total. The six stocks named averaged more than three points higher at the close and, with the most gain for Canadian Pacific and the least for American Can. The change in these stocks illustrates the sudden and pronounced shift in speculative conditions. The short interest was so large that it was top-heavy and had to topple over and be wiped out. The market was so heavily oversold that bears found themselves facing a very limited supply of stocks when they sought to even up contracts and when big buying in Steel and a number of other issues began the scramble for cover was panicky.

Domestic Demand for Copper.

Up to this morning American consumers were still slow to buy copper metal, although Europeans have been purchasing for several days. One reason for caution on the part of domestic manufacturers who use the metal in large quantities is uncertainty as to the trade outlook. They are following the hand-to-mouth policy which is now obtaining in all manufacturing circles in this country. Now that a new tariff is in force there is a disposition to wait awhile and see how much it will affect the country through foreign competition.

Aside from this banking interests have been discouraging business expansion. They desire to have the Currency question settled before credits are extended and industrial interests assume much risk.

Copper warrants were lower in London this morning, but that is likely to have as little influence upon metal buying as the recent advances there. Copper consumers are not paying much attention to speculative movements and are not anxious to stock up even with the metal supply as low as it is stated to be. Regarding the price outlook the National Conduit and Cable Company says:

"Consumption of copper in this country and the general international demand for the metal which has prevailed steadily since January furnished the basis for the market strength so noticeable since the middle of July. But after a price advance since that time of nearly 3 cents a pound, it is not to be wondered at if buyers are chary at a level so far above that of three months ago, and especially with a slacking up in the manufacturing business lately which must be considered in gauging the probable future of consumptive demand. If the demand for copper at home and abroad is maintained even somewhat below the recent high average there is good reason to expect comparatively fair prices, but if a too ambitious program is attempted in the regulation of market quotations the stability of the situation will be liable to undergo changes eventually regrettable to all interests."

Financial News in Brief.

In the London copper warrants market this morning, spot and futures declined 12s 6d each.

Control of the Knox hat business, formerly held by Colonel Edward M. Knox, has passed to a syndicate headed by C. G. Brazier of Boston, said to be affiliated with J. P. Morgan & Co.

During the year which ended with June last the imports of India rubber totalled 113,000,000 pounds, which is a new high record. The value of the rubber was $101,000,000 against $105,000,000 for the 1912 importations, which were about 3,000,000 pounds less. Rubber declined about five cents a pound during the year.

It is announced that the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific has more than $2,000,000 banked with which to pay interest upon its 4 per cent. collateral trust bonds. The interest amounts to $1,427,000.

The Bombay Stock Exchange was closed today because of demoralized financial conditions in India as a result of the failure of the Credit Bank of India on Oct. 3. The absence of several of India's most influential financiers, who are now in England, was also a factor.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

Will M. Cressey, the vaudeville artist, who was in Boston last week, has driven his 1910 Rambler over 74,000 miles. On his first trip of 1,600 miles, Mr. Cressey says it cost him just thirty cents for repairs and he had but one puncture during the trip. This car has been driven through sixteen different countries, including the Hawaii Islands, the Philippines, England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and Canada.

On one occasion Mr. Cressey drove his car from Boston to the Pacific Coast over some of the worst roads in the country. When he arrived in one Western city after covering some particularly bad roads, he placed the car on the scales and found that it carried 800 pounds of mud.

R. M. Downing of the Downing-Detroit Cycle Car Company will drive a twelve horsepower cycle car from Boston to San Francisco and establish a time record for this distance. He will leave Boston on November 2.

Among the cars at the Paris show is the Briscoe, which is built at Billancourt, near the Renault place, by Benjamin Briscoe, ex-president of the United States Motor Company, with particular reference to the American market. Briscoe also is preparing a cycle car to be called the Ajax.

G. G. Hammond Awarded Divorce

Back Bay and North Shore society discussed with interest the writing of the final chapter in the romance of the Gardiner Green Hammonds, Mr. Hammond having been granted a decree of absolute divorce on the grounds of continued desertion for three years.

The hearing of the case in court at Barnstable lasted but fifteen minutes and was not contested by Mrs. Hammond's attorney. No question of alimony was raised and the judge ordered that Mr. Hammond should have proper access to his children, the guardianship of whom would be definitely decided later if necessary.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—The Board of Arbitration in the Eastern railways dispute is making every possible effort to have the award ready for filing by Saturday. It will go into effect within ten days after the date of filing.

MUNGIVEN ASKS PROBE OF WIFE'S STRANGE DEATH

PROVIDENCE, Oct. 22.—The search for witnesses of the death of Mrs. Florence Mungiven, whose body was found lying in Broad street, near Sackett street, in the Washington Park section, was resumed today by Captain Peter Cannon and Inspector John Armstrong. They are in charge of the investigation and the [illegible] of Dr. W. Scott Wells is still being held by the police as [illegible].

The dead woman is the wife of Robert Mungiven, an actor known on the stage as Robert Jewell, who is urging the police to take action. The Mungivens lived at No. 12 Prince street and she leaves a baby, Kathleen, eight weeks old. The funeral takes place tomorrow from St. Bernard's Chapel.

SOUR, UPSET STOMACHS FIXED IN FIVE MINUTES—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN

Best for Indigestion, Gas, Heartburn and Dyspepsia—It's Great!

When your meals don't fit comfortably, or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your pharmacist a fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, nausea, debilitating headaches, dizziness or intestinal griping. This will all go, and, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach to poison your breath with nauseous odors.

Pape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.

Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.

These large fifty-cent cases contain enough "Pape's Diapepsin" to keep the entire family free from stomach disorders and indigestion for many months. It belongs in your home.

HARVARD COACHES PLAN TO SHIFT CAPTAIN BOB STORER FROM TACKLE TO END POSITION

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

BIG SHAKEUP EXPECTED IN CITY BOWLING LEAGUE TONIGHT—SOMERSET OUT FOR THE LEAD

Harvard Squad Given Hardest Work of Year

Crimson Players Work Behind Closed Gates Today—May Shift Storer

By SYDE LYNES.

IF there are any real signs of a mid-season slump [illegible] Harvard eleven, they [illegible] to be [illegible] hand [illegible] scrimmage [illegible] doors in the Stadium. [illegible] the second [illegible] the big Crimson machine, which [illegible] the time closely resembled a 1905 model, it is time something drastic was done.

Of course, there is every possibility that silk hats and Prince Alberts, to say nothing of dainty pearl gray gloves and perfectly darling walking sticks, [illegible] and something [illegible] do with the slump and we should recommend that the graduate treasurer or whoever has charge of such things, issue an edict that will prohibit such affairs from approaching within shooting distance of the Stadium. Quite so, of course you don't know what we are talking about, but we shall elucidate.

PROBABLY TOGS WERE TO BLAME.

THIS is not a social column but merely the outlet for protests. "Sam" Felton, former Harvard All-American end and originator of the famous "Fadeaway" punt which when applied to a football made a greased pig resemble a ball of glue, was married, and "Dick" Wigglesworth and "Perk" Wendell, both well known on the Crimson gridiron were two of the ushers. After attending the ceremony they attended the more bloody drama being enacted in the Stadium, without delaying to make a shift from their joy rags. My how gay the field did look, but we fear it had a bad reaction on the players. In honor of the event, however, the lights on the new Anderson bridge were ablaze when the pair doubled back to Harvard Square, twirling their sticks and swinging their coat tails gaily in the breeze. It was a grand sight.

WESTON'S NOSE GOUGED.

AFTER having recovered from their bedazzlement with the aid of a good night's rest the Crimson Hubs with sharpened claws went at it again with the scrubs and had revenge for the nasty trick the scrubs pulled off on them.

A touchdown and a goal from the field was the extent of the carnage effected by the scrubs, unless it is mentioned that a good sized chunk of meat was gouged from Weston's nose in the melee. This is not really carnage, however.

BRICKLEY HURT AGAIN.

THE scrubs were given the ball on the varsity's 25-yard line and finding a wall of adamant, more or less opposite them, they decided to have Hoag kick, which he did from the 25-yard line and the ball sailed straight and true between the uprights for a neat little score of three points. Shortly after this the varsity started an 80-yard march down the field, short but consistent gains finally making it possible for Brickley to rush the last four yards to a touchdown. Brickley was in the scrimmaging for the first time since the Williams game, when he hurt his hip, and now he's out again, as he wrenched his ankle slightly. Not very bad, but sufficient to make it advisable to give him a little rest along with the other lame ducks, such as Hardwick and Hitchcock and Trumbull.

GILMAN DOING WELL.

THE varsity was shy a number of the regulars, including both tackles, Pennock at guard and Trumbull at centre, but the attack in the beginning of the hour of scrimmage was a little more regular in its charge and therefore more effective than previously. Gilman at tackle put up a very fine game and he is doing so well that, in view of the fact that D. P. Morgan, a freshman tackle last year, is now out for this position, Storer will be tried at end. Morgan is tipping the scales at close to 190 pounds, and looks to be in pretty fine fettle as they usually say of horses.

Not long after this, however, the varsity got the shock of their lives. Someone fumbled at midfield for the varsity and Green, one of the scrub's line, scooped up the ball and unimpeded, meaning without restrictions about the feet, although he wore shoes and stockings, beat a hasty line to the varsity's goal and a touchdown.

THE CRIPPLE'S ROW.

JUST about this time Cripple's Row, about midway up the Stadium, rose en masse and gave the players an intimitable imitation of the lost soul's in Dante's Inferno. This same Cripple's Row was composed of five of the lame ducks all swathed in red blankets like so many Indian squaws, and seated in a dignified row. With the unfortunate youths, still retained to suffer the fate of candidates for the managership of the Crimson football team, standing about the Stadium even like Longfellow's "druids of old with voices sad and prophetic," one could barely help thinking of the same man's primeval forest, with a flock of Indians squatting therein. A stone quarry, however, would be more the point here.

TO TRY OUT STORER AT END.

THE trying out of Captain Storer at end, while somewhat of a surprise to supporters of the Crimson, is certainly a wise thing. He has demonstrated ever since he has played with the eleven, that he is easily one of the fastest men on the team. From his position at tackle at the present time, he is usually down the field with the ends, and one of the surest tacklers on the squad. He is also a keen follower of the ball, and is always quick to take advantage of every opportunity that presents itself. Last year, scoring on Yale for the first time the Crimson had crossed the Blue goal line for many years, when he picked up a fumbled punt and ran down the field. Last week, against Holy Cross, he repeated this performance. He has a great deal of unusual football sense, and is quick to diagnose, and should the coaches decide to keep him at end, where he is pretty certain to make good, he will be one of the strongest bidders for an All-American position.

SUBURBANS IN ONLY SCHOOL GAMES OF DAY

Today will be a day of rest for the city high schools. No local eleven has a game scheduled. There are some good games carded among the preparatory and suburban schools, however. The most important of these perhaps are the games between Groton and Lawrence, Andover and Cushing Academies, and St. Mark's and Allen Schools.

Groton and Lawrence Academies are as a rule represented by strong teams. This year Groton made a bad start but of late the team has shown much improvement. It defeated Milton Academy 7 to 0 last Saturday. Lawrence has been going well right along and a good game may be expected.

Andover met defeat at the hands of Harvard Freshies in its first game, but they are going into the game with Cushing to win.

Andover has some local high school boys on its team, and they are going to give a good account of themselves.

St. Mark's, fresh from its victory over Middlesex, will clash with Allen School today. St. Mark's has one of the fastest teams this year that ever represented the school. Allen School, on the other hand, have but little to look back upon. The team is light and composed mostly of new men. Nevertheless, they are full of fight and may spring a surprise on St. Mark's.

Dedham High and Revere High, at Revere, and Winthrop High and Swampscott, at Winthrop, are the only games to be played around Boston.

SCHOOL GAMES

GAMES TODAY.

Revere High vs. Dedham High at Revere.
Winthrop High vs. Swampscott High at Winthrop.
Natick High vs. Concord High at Concord.
Allen School vs. St. Mark's School at Southboro.
Cushing Academy vs. Andover at Andover.
Groton vs. Lawrence Academy at Groton.
Brockton High vs. Bridgewater Normal at Brockton.

RESULTS YESTERDAY.

McGovern Re-elected B. C. Track Leader

The Boston College track team has re-elected Leo "Terry" McGovern captain for this year. McGovern is a star miler at college. The recently appointed Manager William Desmond, '14, of Cambridge, has hopes of a very successful year. "Husky" Walsh, who was out of the game last season, will be a star member of the squad. A number of meets are being arranged for and will be held in Boston.

SCHOOLBOY SPORT NOTES

Latin School slipped one over unexpectedly by administering a 6 to 0 defeat to Brookline High. Brookline was picked as a sure winner, but the Warren avenue boys surprised all with their great team work. The backs hit the line hard, and the line played a good defensive game. Brookline also played good, clean football.

* * *

O'Dowd was the hero of the game. After intercepting a forward pass he ran half the length of the field for a touchdown. It was one of the most startling runs made this year on a schoolboy gridiron.

* * *

"Bennie" Murray, Enright, Tarrant and Besarick were the stars for Latin School, each one contributing a great deal towards the victory.

* * *

Captain Alex Anderson of Somerville High, who has been laid up for some time with injuries, will start the game Saturday against Waltham. He will strengthen the team considerably.

* * *

Dassossolt, Captain O'Connor and Litchfield are playing slashing football for Brookline High this year.

* * *

Herbert Kempton, quarterback on Malden's champion team last year, and McDonough of Manchester High are running a great race for the quarterback berth on the Exeter eleven.

* * *

Ryan, the old High School of Commerce athlete, is putting up an excellent game at quarter for Worcester Academy. He has the makings of a good player.

* * *

Sam Wendell, brother of Percy Wendell, Harvard's last year's captain, is playing well for Morristown. His kicking and carrying of the ball has been one of the features of the team's play.

* * *

It has been rumored that "Buck" Sweetland had returned to Everett and was to play against English Saturday, but so far as can be learned this is without foundation.

* * *

Waltham High has been cleaning up things right along so far this year. Coach Harry Dame has a good bunch of players under his guidance. They show that fight Waltham is famed for.

* * *

Greed, the former Boston College High star, is playing centre on St. John's Prep.

* * *

Talcott, the Winthrop High star, is an all-round athlete. Not only is he a football player of note, but also a great swimmer and baseball player.

MITCHELL'S SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

THE full itinerary of the baseball tour of the world by the Giants and White Sox has been published. On December 3 the tourists will reach Yokohama where it is expected Hub Perdue will desert the team and spend some weeks in the Japanese tea houses. On February 12 the players will reach Monte Carlo and McGraw will doubtless resign then and there. When the Pilgrims reach Paris on February 15 it is expected that the management will not be able to muster enough men to put one team in the field, let alone two. What is left of the outfit will quit when Dublin is reached on February 27.

SOME capitalists of Newark are trying to buy the Newark club from Charlie Ebbets, who also owns the Brooklyn club. It is to be hoped for the welfare of the International League that the deal goes through. It is a big handicap to the International League to have some of its clubs owned by major league magnates. The Providence club is owned by Navin, Yawkey and others who control the Detroit Tigers. Jersey City is owned by a relative of Frank Farrell's partner, the New York Americans. Newark is owned by the Brooklyn club. It is commonly supposed Connie Mack practically owns the Baltimore club.

The handicap is this: If one of the big league clubs needs a man in the middle of the season, that can be supplied by the International League club it also owns, the player is yanked to the big league city, no matter how much harm it does the International League club at the time. The fans resent this sort of thing. It would not be surprising if the International League passed laws at its coming meeting which will prevent a major league club owner from being interested in an International League club.

EDDIE COLLINS and Walter Johnson were the only players who met with the unanimous choice of ten big league baseball managers who picked all star teams for a New York Sunday newspaper. Every other star was passed up by at least one leader, although as a general thing an outfield made up of Cobb, Jackson and Speaker, with Daubert, Collins, Barry and Baker for the infield was the choice.

Various managers favored their own players. McGraw picked Fletcher for short, Evers selected Cheney as one of his pitchers, Callahan had Chase on first and Schalk behind the plate, while Jennings thought it a toss-up between Bush and Barry for short.

AMONG some unusual selections were Magee and Carey in Charley Dooin's outfield in place of Speaker and Jackson, while Zimmerman was on third in place of Baker. McGraw had Sallee as one of his pitchers, while Johnny Evers put Jack Murray of the Giants in right field rather than Jackson. Callahan favored Joe Tinker for short. Miller Huggins liked Lobert at third as well as Baker, while Branch Rickey, the new manager of the St. Louis Browns, thought the shortfield belonged to either Al Bridwell or Chapman of Cleveland.

THE worst is yet to come and Connie Mack will be accused by some "fans" of rank baseball heresy. The manager of the world's champions absolutely disregarded Ty Cobb, the leading hitter in both major leagues for four years. ... picks Jackson, Speaker and Oldring for his outfield.

... has never forgiven Cobb for an alleged spiking episode several years ago.

THE announcement is made that the Toronto club will train with the Giants at Marlin Springs next year. This strengthens the belief that the Boston National will go to Macon, Ga., for Spring training. The ... at Macon are too small to accommodate two ball clubs. Toronto ... Macon last Spring.

LOSING three world's series in succession seldom helps a baseball club's popularity, and the Giants will have to suffer for their three lickings, the same as did the Tigers when they lost in 1907, 1908 and 1909. The editor of the Enid Events, of Enid, Oklahoma, is especially severe on Gotham's favorites. Here is what he says, in typical Western lingo:

"Trouble with the 'Giants' (a thrice four X misnomer) is that they are just a big bunch of 'big stiffs' who are all right if they don't go into the air, but who may be expected to break their bobbles at any time, hop bench-legged and be distanced like ring-boned colts at a country fair ... World's Series, yet at the supreme test they ... a taffy ...

If You Want to Be an Up-to-Date Dancer Don't Fail to Read Donald Brian's First Lesson in His New Twirl on This Page

By Donald Brian

THE main thing to remember about any dance is to base it entirely upon the turkey trot tempo

Almost anything can be done in the way of variations, if one has the regular turkey trot swing to begin with

So it can easily be seen that anything in the way of a new dance is absolutely impossible—it is simply left to the skill and originality of the inventor to so combine certain steps that a dance is devised which seems an absolutely new departure from all old methods

The new dance I have called "The Futurist Twirl," but it is nothing more or less than a combination of the tango and turkey trot with greatly exaggerated steps.

However, the rapidity which comes with practice, makes a very unusual effect, and it is possible for anyone who dances to perfect this whole dance without any trouble at all.

Everything in the "Futurist Twirl" is based upon a system of eight counts.

So, if this makes an impression in the beginning it will simplify matters in the end

Always remember that each position and set of steps end with eight counts

In the first position the man and girl stand side by side, the man with his right arm around the girl's waist and her left hand in his, and eight regular turkey trot steps are taken down the room in this position

THIRD POSITION

PREPARING FOR THE "FISH WALK."

[illegible] posed by Do[illegible] for this page.)

Then the position is rapidly changed, and the man and girl take the regular position for dancing but with the man's left and the girl's right hand held out.

Always remember this fact. It gives more freedom and yet a better feeling of security to both dancers, and besides it looks better

Then comes the regular fish walk with an exaggerated stride on the part of the man. This is done in the regular turkey trot or tango position. The walk can be practiced by p[illegible] the right foot forward and dragging it back on the ball of the foot, and then giving place to the left and going through the same motions again.

The girl in the meantime walks back eight steps in tempo, the regular turkey trot walk, with the man. The fish walk, in an exaggerated style, is the only thing that needs particular practice in this first part of the dance.

It is a great deal like skipping with an exaggerated pull backward on each step, and is not at all difficult to accomplish. It must be remembered that the man alone does this fish walk, while the girl simply walks back in time to the music.

Thus the fish walk is really the only departure from the ordinary trot in this part of the dance.

When beginning to learn this dance remember to first of all perfect your turkey trot swing, as this is most important.

No one who does not turkey should attempt to learn any variations, as it would be merely a waste of time. Then get into the spirit of the thing and let yourself go

This is, after all, the real secret of dancing. Absolute abandonment to the movements of the dance and the ability to really enjoy oneself.

After one has all this for a background, the "Futurist Twirl" itself is a thing of easy attainment, and the next movements can be more easily explained and understood

Read About the Pretty Nurse in

A Bachelor's Diary

She Gives Him a Hug and Calls Him and Angel, Which He Denies

By MAX.

SEPT. 20—I tried to simulate a chill and shake out some new ailment when the man from the hotel called a third time to take my pretty nurse for a ride, but all the shaking was in vain She laughed at me and called me a baby, and when I got cross wanted to know, with made-up tears in her eyes, if I wanted to stand between a poor girl and her chance at happiness

"Chance at happiness!" I hooted at that. If "chance at happiness" means a ride with a man with a walrus mustache and an expression like an eel in a Noah's Ark of a rig, then chances for happiness are growing mighty slim for the women.

"I'll take you back to town with me," I protested, "and introduce you to some really big fish if you insist on a marine love affair. Why do you want to waste your time on a sardine like that?

"Perhaps," softly, "it isn't wasting my time"

'Well, then, you are wasting mine. Oh go" seeing that she looked a little hurt but go out the back way. I don't want to be shocked into a relapse by seeing you in any more of your street lotnes"

But she started the front way, and th[illegible] me she wore dark red with enough purple about her to remind me of an amateur artist's sunset

I have been planning with Richards that when we get back to town, Richards whose taste in dress is excellent, will take her around to the stores and fit her out in soft grays and golden browns, with all sorts of furs to match. I can't take her around in my machine in her white uniform and announce in that way to the city and the stock market that I am in need of the attendance of a nurse, and I would be ashamed to exhibit her in her rainbow garments

A HARD LIFE

"We will keep her," I said to Richards, "until she has had a nice long rest A nurse's life is a hard one, and she has been mighty patient with me all these weeks."

"She is a good little girl," commented the faithful Richards. "Most girls in her position would have set their caps for you"

I started to say that that was just what she tried to do, and remembered to stop just in time Perhaps I have just imagined it. A man is always a self centered animal and is apt to imagine [illegible] HIM control [illegible] him

This is particularly true of a bachelor I find myself suspecting matrimonial designs in every woman I meet and am growing just as cautious in my dealings with them as a tom cat is in crossing a strange back yard

Sept. 21—I walked as far as the gate this morning without any assistance, not even that of a cane, and tomorrow intend to walk to the turn of the little [illegible] path, where it seems to hesitate as if fearful of what is ahead and then plunges bravely into the heart of the woods

I will take Manette with me Before my accident we explored all the woods a mile or two from the house, but never became acquainted with the pretty little walks nearer home. That is not strange, however. A man knowns all about the outside of his house, all the business to it, when he is well and strong. It takes sickness to discover for him that there are five roses in one bunch and three in the next, with two leaves in between, in the border of the wall paper of his bedroom

Sept. 23—I walked as far as the turn of the path in the woods today Manette and the pup going with me. It seemed nice to [illegible] with these two again the first time in many, many weeks

PRAYERS FOR HIM

'My prayers for your recovery," said Richards, who met us at the garden gate on our return, "have been answered." She had prayed, she said, every night and morning since the accident that I would get well and strong and not be the cripple the doctors had feared

It made me feel good to think someone is praying for me. No one ever prays for a rich man. They pray in church for the widows and the orphans, for those who are suffering or destitute, for those who go out to sea in ships, and for the redemption of the drunkard, but no one prays for the rich man

He has a disease worse than a fondness for liquor He began, too, with no special craving for that which became his curse. He thought he would make a little money, and as wealth grew his appetite grew with it. The dollar ceased to be his slave, and became his master, but no one prayed for him

"Why," every churchgoer will ask, "should anyone pray for him? He has lots of money."

That is true, he has. And he also has grave responsibilities, obligations to whom he knows not, nor how to discharge them. He also has loneliness heartache, suffers the fate of the misjudged and misunderstood, and learns, too often to keep his faith in humanity sweet that none approach him except with mercenary motives

September 24—Tompkins has the town house in readiness for us, but our departure will be delayed a few weeks longer to gratify a wish expressed by Manette. She said she would like to come up here every Summer, and the wish resulted in my purchase this morning, of several hundred acres adjoining Allen's home. I have sent for an architect, and we will spend some time longer up here planning for a bungalow to be built a few rods from this place, near the pretty turn in the woods. I want it near enough for Allen to be caretaker while we are away, and that we may enjoy the old fashioned joy of having neighbors when we are here

THE PLAN

It will be built of logs, with huge log beams in the ceiling. There will be a bedroom on the second floor for me, connecting rooms for Richards and Manette, and two or three guest rooms, with rooms above for the maids.

The pretty nurse is to spend a month every Summer with us.

'It will do me good," I urged, "to have you here. The constant danger of succumbing to your charms will make my blood circulate and keep me young"

You might" contemplatively, "fall in love with me

"Of course," I replied, 'there would always be that danger, but I shall enjoy it Sometimes the fishing and hunting up here are not good and the constant association with you will furnish the sport I might otherwise lack."

She laughed, and turning quickly toward me, gave me a little hug, calling me an angel.

'I'm not an angel," I growled, "I'm a man, and for that reason you mustn't do such things That's the cause of a lot of trouble. You women forgetting that we men are very live and very wicked, and treating us as if we were angels, made up of nothing but draperies and feathers"

The Man Fearing Disinheritance

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am nineteen years of age and in love with a girl of eighteen. I am in business with my father, who is wealthy. I love this girl, but my father said he would disinherit me if I marry her. I have $900 of my own and I want to go somewhere and start a business for myself for I will not give up the girl. She wants to go with me and help make our fortune. Shall we marry now and go together, or shall I leave her till my fortune is made?

E. H., Decatur, Ill

DISINHERIT—pooh—that's a word to frighten the hero in a three-act melodrama

It doesn't belong in a good American vocabulary at all.

Disinherit—what can he disinherit you from?

You health—your courage—your manhood—your independence—why any one of these qualities is worth a dozen fortunes.

Don't give one of them up for the sake of a little money, for hearken—the money you can make and lose, and get and gain—in no time, and be neither better nor worse, nor happier nor more miserable than you were before you had it or lost it

Your character is a different thing that is in the making now—don't let any love of money for mere money's sake cripple your character now, when it is just in the making

There's nothing in it

Go to your father and talk to him like a man—say to him, "Father, I love you, I respect you, I am deeply grateful for everything you are trying to do for me. I don't believe you quite understand—I want to explain.

WHAT TO SAY

'I love this girl and she loves me—we believe that we can be happy together why do you want to prevent our marriage? Would you like the sort of a man who would give up the girl he loves just for the sake of money?

"Do you want me to stay with you and do as you bid—not because I love you and want to be with you, but because I want to clutch at your money"

[illegible] that the sort of a son you want? I don't believe it

Who is it that you want me to marry? Some girl who has money too and who will help me 'build up the business'?

Don't you know that the kind of money that comes that way is a liability every time and not an asset?

"Don't you realize that a square, honest, courageous man is worth more to any business than all the money he could inherit by being a flattering coward?

A LEADING QUESTION

"And, father, tell me—the truth now—I'm not a boy any longer. I'm a man—a man that wants to do the square thing by you and by myself—talk to me man fashion—tell me—who chose my mother to be your wife?

"And who was there in the world that could have made you give her up after the day she said to you 'I love you'

Nine hundred dollars of your own, eh? Well, if worst comes to worst, that's more than it has taken to start many a fortune

Talk it all over with your father think it all over carefully and earnestly, and then take your sweetheart by the hand and look the world in the face with a light heart—and let the fortune go.

Finds out that the drug, caffeine, in coffee is the cause of headache, nervousness, irritable heart, insomnia or some other obscure ache or pain.

Steady nerves and a clear brain—the best asset any man or woman can have—are often impossible to the regular coffee drinker.

If you are ambitious enough to "get ahead," suppose you stop coffee and try hot, well-made

POSTUM

If the old aches and pains begin to leave after a few days on Postum, you'll know whether to stick to it or go back to coffee troubles

Postum now comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled.

Instant Postum is a soluble powder. A spoonful dissolves in a cup of hot water, and with sugar and cream makes a delicious beverage instantly.

Drink It instead of coffee—

"There's a Reason"

EASY CHANGE
When Coffee Is Doing Harm.

A lady writes from the land of cotton of the results of a four years' use of the food beverage, Postum:

"Ever since I can remember we had used coffee three times a day. It had a more or less injurious effect upon us all, and I suffered almost death from indigestion and nervousness.

"I know it was coffee, because when I would leave it off for a few days I would feel better. But it was hard to give coffee up, even though I realized how harmful it was to me.

"At last I found a perfectly easy way to make the change. Four years ago I abandoned the coffee habit and began to drink Postum and I also influenced the rest of the family to do the same.

"Even the children are allowed to drink it as freely as they do water And it has done us all great good. I no longer suffer from indigestion, and my nerves are in admirable tone since I began to use Postum. We never use coffee any more.

"We appreciate Postum as a delightful and healthful beverage, which not only invigorates but supplies the best of nourishment as well." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Does Your Father Object to You Marrying the Man You Love? Read "A Letter to Mary" on This Page---A New Series

FICTION PAGES FOR THE HOME

BOSTON AMERICAN, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 22, 1913.

A Letter to Mary

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

A CERTAIN little girl whose father is necessarily away from home a great deal found the following letter from him under the plate this morning:

"You ask my consent to your marriage with John. Since you were old enough to climb on my lap and whisper a desire in my ear I have given you everything you longed for. I see my mistake, for now, when you ask for something I should refuse, I know that the power of refusal is beyond me.

"I know that you ask me as a matter of form; that should I say no you will do as you have done for years; laugh at my refusal, and then proceed as it pleases you.

"This is my fault. I am not blaming you, my child. I have never taught you to investigate, to reason, or to consider the consequences. When I knew your own way would not be best for you I have weakly let you have it, and then have thrust myself between you and the punishment that came afterward.

"In this case I cannot do that. Have you thought of that?

"So I say in the beginning that I will give my consent to your marriage with John if you insist; but I wonder at your ignorance (or bravery) in dreaming of going away from your home with a man you have known less than six months, and then chiefly through correspondence.

SOME DOUBTS

"You know that he is good looking, is of pleasing manners, generous to a fault with his money, and that you love him. You will marry him and go with him to a strange town, and you do not know what his standing in that town is.

"You do not know if he is considered in his home town the kind of a man a respectable girl cares to go with; you do not know if he is good to his mother; if his business prospects entitle him to assume the support of a wife.

"You do not know what his habits are. He may drink, gamble, loaf and be addicted to the company of those who blaze the primrose path, but of this you know nothing. You are not making as much effort to learn something of the character of the man who wants to be your partner for life as your mother makes in finding out about the maid whose stay will not be longer than six months.

"You know nothing whatever about him, yet you are anxious to go away from your comfortable home, to risk a leap in the dark, landing only the good Lord knows where!

"Your mother and I have never let you take a trip as far as ten miles from home without assurance of who would meet you at the end, and how you would fare. This is a trip for life, and we are powerless to protect you.

"BE SURE"

"You may throw up your own safeguards, my dear! We have let you have your own sweet, reasonable way too many years to protest now. We have brought you up to the habit of your own way. We want you to have it now, if it is for your happiness, but we want you to be sure that it is.

"Love is all there is in life, by dear. I have been happy too many years in the love of your mother to decry it. But when I courted her, it was with her father's permission, after proving to that worthy gentleman's satisfaction that I was of good moral habits, stood well in my home town, had no past to conceal and was willing and able to support her in every luxury she had enjoyed in her home. We had known each other five years, and were engaged two years.

"I did not engage her in correspondence for a few weeks and then ask her to marry me without first presenting my credentials to her father. I did not use less consideration in taking his daughter from his home forever than I would have taken in borrowing his horse for an hour.

CHANGED TIMES

"The times have changed. Your mother and I realize that this rapidfire courting, with easy divorce to follow, is quite the fashion, but it is not the fashion we want our girl to follow.

"We want you to love, to be loved and to marry. But we want, more than this, for you to marry so happily you will stay married. We don't want you to come back in a few months with every hope every faith in life and love and mankind trailing in the dust.

"I give my consent, of course, realizing that if I refused it you would marry without it, but I am going to put it straight up to you to be sure in your own heart that you want it.

"It is up to you! Shall I order the wedding cake, as I ordered the doll you cried for when a child, or will you make him prove his worthiness first?"

An Exquisite Evening Gown

FULLY DESCRIBED BY OLIVETTE

Behold an elaborate evening frock of white satin and duchess lace.

Behold and admire, for this model comes from one of the smartest designers in all Paris.

A blouse of the lace extends under the arms, where it turns back to make a rever under the arm.

This bodice is held up on one side by a band of white net edged with small beads and on the other side by a cap made of several rows of iridescent spangles.

A motif of black jet marks the side of the square decolletage.

At the waist is a tiny belt made of two rows of iridescent spangles

Below this are two tiny panniers, and below this the lace falls in an irregular tunic.

The under part of the skirt is a mass of the iridescent spangles over which falls a garland of beads and jet tassels.

Beneath this the foundation skirt of white satin falls in a long-pointed train.

THE KING OF DIAMONDS!

BY LOUIS TRACY

A THRILLING STORY OF A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

TODAY'S INSTALMENT

Copyright, 1904, by Edward J. Clode.

PHILIP himself grew enthusiastic as he went on. His brown eyes blazed again with the memory of his wrath and shame at the arrest. He told the magistrate how the proceedings in court had affected him, and gave a vivid picture of his bargaining with Isaacstein, the packing of the diamonds, the fight between the policeman and a burglar, his interviews with all sorts and conditions of men, and the ruses he had adopted to preserve his secret.

At last he came to the transaction which secured for him the ownership of the mews itself. He read copies of his letters to the solicitors, and their replies, and then, of course, the magistrate knew where the meteor had fallen.

"That is a very clever move on your part," he said, smiling. "It invests you with all the rights and usages of that particular piece of earth, and effectually stops anyone from disputing your possession of the meteor. How did you come to think of it?"

"You put the idea in my mind, sir," said Philip, modestly.

"I? In what manner?"

"You hinted, at our last meeting, that someone might lay claim to my diamonds on the ground that they had fallen on their property. I did not intend that anyone living, except yourself, shall ever know the history of my meteor, but I thought it best to buy the place outright in the first instance, and then devote it to a charity which I intend to found in memory of my mother."

Mr. Abingdon smiled again.

"Your confidence is very flattering," he said. "I suppose you took up your quarters at the Pall Mall Hotel in order to impress people with your importance and secure instant compliance with your wishes?"

"That was my motive, sir."

"Then, my young millionaire, in what way do you wish me to serve you? Of course, you have not sought this interview and told me your story so unreservedly without an ulterior object in view? You see, I am beginning to understand you already a little beter than when we first met."

Philip did not reply immediately. He did not want to risk a refusal, and he was not yet quite sure that the magistrate fully comprehended the extent of the fortune which had been showered on him from nature's own mint.

"When Mr. Isaacstein returns from Amsterdam he will pay me something like 40,000 pounds," he said.

"Yes. It would seem so from the receipt you have shown me."

"That will be determined on Wednesday next at the latest."

"Yes."

"If the money is forthcoming it will be proof positive that my diamonds are of good quality, and, as I picked up these dirty stones quite promiscuously, it follows that the others are of the same standard?"

"Undoubtedly."

"Well, Mr. Abingdon, I can form no estimate of their collective value, but they must be worth many millions. According to Mr. Isaacstein's views, I will be able to command a revenue of between a quarter and half a million sterling per annum."

"It is marvellous, perfectly appalling in some senses!" cried the perturbed lawyer, throwing up his hands in the extremity of his amazement.

"You are right, sir. I am only a boy, and the thing is beyond my powers. I can see quite clearly that while I ought to be at college obtaining a proper education, I will be worrying about the care of great sums of money. I do not know anything about investments. How should I? I have no older relatives, no friends whom I can trust. For some reason, I do feel that I can have faith in you. Will you take charge of my affairs, advise me during the next few years, tell me how to act as my mother would have told me—in a word, become my guardian?"

For a little while Mr. Abingdon was silent. When words came he could only gasp:

"You certainly are the most extraordinary boy I have ever encountered."

Then Philip laughed merrily.

"I don't think, sir, that I am so much an extraordinary boy as a boy who has been pitchforked into an extraordinary position. I hope most sincerely that you will do what I ask. If I may say so, without presumption, it will be a good thing for you. I suppose a man who looks after millions of money is entitled to a vastly bigger income than one who sits hours in a police court dealing with offenses against the law."

THE REAL BOSS

"Such has certainly been my experience," said the magistrate.

"Then you agree," cried Philip, joyously.

"Not so fast, my youthful friend. Even a police magistrate must bow to his wife. Mrs. Abingdon would never forgive me if I took such an important step without consulting her. Will you remain to dinner?"

Then Philip knew that he had gained his point. Nothing was said before the servants, but when they were cozily ensconced in the library before a pleasant fire, he was asked to relate again his entrancing history for Mrs. Abingdon's benefit.

That good lady was overwhelmed. She, like everybody else, had read the newspapers, and, of course, had the additional benefit of her husband's views on the subject of the unkempt boy with his small parcel of valuable gems.

But the presence of Philip under their roof, the glamour of the tale as it fell from his lips, cast a spell over her. She was a kindly soul, too, and tears gathered in her eyes at some portions of the recital.

"What a pity it is that your mother died," she murmured, when he had ended.

The words endeared her to Philip instantly. A worldly, grasping woman would have thought of nothing save the vista of wealth opened up for her husband and herself. Not so Mrs. Abingdon. If anything, she was somewhat afraid of the responsibilities proposed to be undertaken by her spouse, to whom she was devoted.

The magistrate did not promise definitely that night to accept the position offered to him. He would think over the matter. He could retire on a pension at any time. This he would do now without delay, and Philip could certainly count on his friendship and advice, while his house would always be open to him.

Meanwhile, he would give one word of advice—intrust no human being with the power to sign any binding document without his—Philip's—consent. Then it would be difficult for any one to deal unscrupulously with him.

The boy went away at a late hour. He left behind him an exceedingly perplexed couple, but he felt that when Mr. Abingdon had time to assimilate the facts, and realize the great scope of the work before him, there was little doubt he would gladly associate himself with it.

At the hotel a telegram awaited him:

"Have realized for fifty-two thousand. Returning Monday.

"ISAACSTEIN."

Here was final proof, if proof were wanting. Philip was a millionaire many times over.

Up-to-Date Jokes

The Englishman and German were arguing about their different navies.

"Oh," said the German, "there is always something the matter with your navy. Only yesterday a battleship was fast in the mud."

"Well," said the Englishman, "if a battleship is fast in the mud it would be a record-breaker in the open sea."

The two legislators were talking about schools and found they could not agree on certain matters pertaining to education. The argument waxed warmer and warmer.

"Why, my dear fellow," one finally exclaimed, starting to drive home a point, "I have a school in my mind's eye"——

"Yes, yes," interrupted the other; "but, remember, that has but one pupil."

Bill had got a job as a lorryman, and was one day engaged in conveying goods to the house of a wealthy old gentleman. On being met by one of his pals the next day he was asked whether he got a tip. Without hesitation Bill at once replied:

"Haud yer tongue, man! If you auld yin had the measles he widna gie ye a spot."

"So Mrs. Hayo, the telephone operator has broken her engagement with you?"

"Yep. After she got my number she handed the presents back, put out her little, white, shapely hand"——

"Well?"

"And said: 'Ring off.'"

The Corkscrew

The village schoolmaster had pulled out his twenty-bladed knife and was explaining to his class how all the implements were useless but for the modest bone handle.

"Which part of the knife, therefore, do I make the most use of?" he asked.

A boy at the foot of the class promptly responded: "Please, sir, the corkscrew."

Washing Day in Japan

THE DOMESTICATED WOMEN OF JAPAN, WHO ARE CALLED THE WORLD'S MODEL HOUSEWIVES

THE TRUE JAPANESE WOMAN IS VERY DOMESTIC: SHE COOKS, SEWS, ARRANGES FLOWERS AND ENTERTAINS HER NUMEROUS VISITORS WITH A QUIET DIGNITY AND LEISURELY POLITENESS WHICH FORM A GREAT CONTRAST TO THE RUSH IN WESTERN LIFE. SHE ALSO HAS COUNTLESS MAGAZINES AND BOOKS, AND TO THE KOTO, OR JAPANESE HARP, IS NOW ADDED THE PIANO, ORGAN AND VIOLIN, AND IN EVERY DEPARTMENT OF LIFE THE HORIZON OF THE JAPANESE WOMAN HAS BEEN ENLARGED. THE HOUSEWIFE HAS NO SETTLED DAY FOR WASHING, BUT AS NEED RISES AND WEATHER PERMITS SHE UNPICKS HER KIMONO, WASHES IT, STARCHES IT IN STARCH MADE FROM FLOUR, AND PLACES IT ON A BOARD TO DRY IN THE MANNER DEPICTED ABOVE. THIS METHOD OF DRYING REQUIRES NO IRONING.

Cheap and Easily Made, But Ends a Cough Quickly

How to Make the Very Best Cough Remedy at Home Fully Guaranteed.

This pint of cough syrup is easily made at home and saves you about $2.00 as compared with ordinary cough remedies. It relieves obstinate coughs—even whooping cough—quickly, and is splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, spasmodic croup and hoarseness.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. Tastes good.

This takes right hold of a cough and gives almost instant relief. It stimulates the appetite, and is slightly laxative—both excellent features.

Pinex, as perhaps you know, is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, rich in guaiacol and the other natural healing pine elements.

No other preparation will do the work of Pinex in this mixture, although strained honey can be used instead of the sugar syrup, if desired.

Thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada now use this Pinex and Sugar Syrup remedy. This plan has often been imitated, but the old successful combination has never been equaled. Its low cost and quick results have made it immensely popular.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

ECZEMA ON FACE ITCHED SO SHE COULD NOT SLEEP

Suffering Almost Intolerable and Did Not Go Out Without a Veil. First Use of Resinol Brought Relief.

Chicago, Ill., June 20, 1913.—"I had a severe case of eczema on my face. It looked like little red pimples and got so bad that I did not go out without wearing a veil. I could scarcely sleep at night, the itching and burning were almost intolerable. I had been suffering from this for several weeks, and had tried several salves, but with practically no results. I did not know what I should try next. After one application of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment I was able to have a good night's sleep. I used Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment for only about two months and I was completely cured.

My brother was troubled with pimples on his face and Resinol cured him also." (Signed) Miss G. Ewald, 3518 Castello Ave.

Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap stop itching instantly and speedily heal skin humors, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Sold by every druggist. For free trial, write to Dept. 19-R, Resinol, Baltimore, Md.

Thin Folks Who Would Be Fat

Increase in Weight Ten Pounds or More.

A Physician's Advice

"I'd certainly give most anything to be able to fat up a few pounds and stay that way," declares every excessively thin man or woman. Such result is not impossible, despite past failures. Thin people are victims of malnutrition, a condition which prevents the fatty elements of food from being taken up by the blood as they are when the powers of nutrition are normal. Instead of getting into the blood all the fat and flesh producing elements stay in the intestines until they pass from the body as waste.

To correct this condition and to produce a healthy, normal amount of fat the nutritive processes must be artificially supplied with the power which nature has denied them. This can best be accomplished by eating a Sargol tablet with every meal. Sargol is a scientific combination of six of the most effective elements known to the medical profession. Taken with meals, it mixes with the food to turn the sugars and starches into rich, ripe nourishment for the tissues and blood and its rapid effect is remarkable. Reported gains of from ten to twenty-five pounds in a single month are by no means infrequent. Yet its action is perfectly natural and absolutely harmless. Sargol is sold by good druggists everywhere and every package contains a guarantee of weight increase or money back.

Note:—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in the treatment of nervous indigestion and general stomach disorders, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh producing effect, be used by those who are not willing to increase their weight ten pounds or more.

GOETHALS TO BE FIRST RULER OF FINISHED CANAL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Colonel Goethals is to receive due and explicit honor for his splendid work at Panama.

Plans to honor the constructors of the Panama Canal by appointing them in the order of rank as the governors of the canal zone were completed today by Representative Adamson, who framed legislation bringing the canal into existence.

Adamson intends to introduce a resolution into the House recommending that President Wilson appoint as first civil governors of the canal after its completion, as follows:

First, Colonel Goethals, engineer in charge of the canal construction; then his aides in order of rank, beginning with Colonel William C. Gorgas, sanitary expert, and including Lieutenant-Colonel H. F. Hodges, Lieutenant-Colonel William L. Sibert, Lieutenant-Colonel David DuB. Gaillard and Commander H. H. Rousseau of the navy.

Secretary Garrison sails today from New York for Panama. The secretary's visit is a distinct concession to the hope of Colonel Goethals that some member of the administration should at first hand judge of the conditions and requirements of the canal zone.

Put Tax on Liquor Used in Sweetmeats

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—"Loaded" confections such as rum balls, brandy balls and mint lozenges, which are hollowed candies filled with spirits, hereafter will be subject to special taxes applying to retailers of liquor and to retail liquor dealers.

Winner Eats 23 Apples.

FISHERVILLE, Oct. 22.—Noe P. Pelley won an apple-eating contest in honor of Apple Day by eating twenty-three apples in two hours.

Child-Wife Barred by New Labor Law

LEOMINSTER, Oct. 22.—Fred Dufresne, a Canadian, ran up against the child labor law here after he had found his wife a job to work with the Wachusett Shirt Company. The company found she was only nineteen, and demanded a school certificate. At the school it was found that the woman could not read or write English, and the school committee refused to issue a certificate unless the young wife promised to attend night school. She promised.

Diving Girl Dies as Audience Laughs

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—While a large audience was laughing at a comedian, Gladys Kelly, one of a sextette of diving girls, fell from a diving board to the rear of the stage. She received injuries from which she died.

IF ONE MAN WITH $100,000

CAN MAKE IT EARN FROM TEN TO TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS A YEAR

Did it ever occur to you that a number of persons banded together for the purpose of making money—with $10 each to begin with and 10 CENTS A DAY—paid monthly for 21 months—upon a CO-OPERATIVE PLAN can accomplish the same results?

How would you like to share proportionately in such an income in accordance with the amount you pay monthly?

Money is an active principle, and when properly employed makes more than ordinary rates of interest. It can be made to DOUBLE ITSELF in a short time.

You can make money with your small monthly savings—you can secure an increasing annual income without interfering with your present occupation or depriving yourself of funds already saved.

The only way to learn about this plan is to send for full particulars.

The Judge Found Dead in a Disreputable Dive

Mrs. Pankhurst Insisted on Telling It in Court—Although It Made Her Jail Term Longer

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company

Mrs. Pankhurst is admitted to this country—as we thought she would be.

The distinguished Mr. Wilson and the gentleman whom he put in charge of the Immigration Department, Caminetti, have found it necessary to reverse their views and admit her to this country. She is to see the people of the United States and tell them her story.

She will have many meetings; be sure to attend them and hear her if you can.

You will not in your lifetime have a chance to see another woman of that kind, or one with her courage.

Today we tell you how Mrs. Pankhurst insisted on telling the judge before whom she was tried last time just exactly what she thought about the law and about some of the judges.

The judge tried to stop her, but couldn't—even with the threats which he subsequently "made good" by inflicting a long prison term upon her.

It was Mrs. Pankhurst's intention—in her perfectly orderly, earnest and wonderfully eloquent speech—to take advantage of her opportunity commanding the world's attention, and to tell how the most miserable and unfortunate class of women are treated by the laws.

Long before it became so fashionable in this country and other countries—on the stage and in the pulpit—to discuss "white slavery" Mrs. Pankhurst had pointed out the fact that inequality before the law, the helplessness of women, and the brutality of men were responsible for white slavery. And that laws made by men only would never change conditions.

Inasmuch as certain disreputable journalists and others in this country have been accusing Mrs. Pankhurst of coming here to make money—repeating a lie that was told in England—it is well to state now that Mrs. Pankhurst was a rich woman when she began her fight to get justice for other women.

She has sacrificed her fortune and impoverished herself in that fight. Before she was last sent to jail in England, as the trial went on, the usual cowardly lie was repeated in court—that her agitation was based upon a desire for profit.

Please observe how Mrs. Pankhurst answered that:

Now I hate speaking of personal matters, but many suggestions have been made not only here but even in the House of Commons that I have made money out of this movement, and as evidence, that I own a motor car. I own no motor car, and never have owned one. The union to which I belong owns a motor car for the ordinary propaganda work of the organization. I would say in passing that it is very difficult in this country for a woman to own a motor car, unless she has inherited property. There is only one trade that I know of in which women earn enough to buy motor cars, and that is the abominable trade of ministering to the vicious pleasures of rich men.

My part in the movement has cost me a considerable portion of my income, because I had to surrender a very important part of my income in order to be free to do what I considered was my duty in this movement. It is hardly fitting for counsel to bring suggestions of this kind into so serious a matter.

Now I want to address myself to my defence. I pleaded not guilty because in the indictment I am described as having "wickedly and maliciously incited women to do certain acts." I am not a wicked or a malicious person, neither are any of the women who responded, if they did yield to my incitement.

She might well, in all probability have said, to some of her judges and jurors, that THEY knew the truth of what she had said. And that there was many a man in England, rich, powerful, filled with great contempt for Mrs. Pankhurst and the suffrage movement, who knew what it was to buy an automobile in the way that Mrs. Pankhurst describes.

The most powerful passage in her speech—and that which the judge with typical cowardice tried to suppress, was Mrs. Pankhurst's determined revelation of the character of certain judges in England, chosen to try women, and to punish them for the FAULT of men.

Among the judges who inflicted trivial punishments on men that ruined girls, one at least had been found dead in a vile den—a white slave establishment. The judge, try as he might, could not suppress Mrs. Pankhurst or her statement. For she is A FIGHTER, and in court or out, and in spite of any judge, she will have her say. That is why the judges don't LIKE her.

Thus she began on the subject so difficult for a woman of her character to discuss:

I want to say a few words to you, very serious words—having dealt with the law itself—about the administration of it. Now, my lord, it is a very difficult thing to do, but I must find courage to do it, because for me and for thousands of women whom I feel I represent here today, this is a burning question. The laws are inadequate as to injustices to women, but in addition we are satisfied that the administration of the law is very imperfect. I was a very young woman when my attention was called to this in a very painful way.

The judge who listened to Mrs. Pankhurst knew well what was coming, and interrupted her, saying:

"Mrs. Pankhurst, I am very loath to interrupt, but there must be some limit of propriety observed by women in your position. I must ask you to observe the proper decorum incumbent upon you, and confine yourself to that."

To this Mrs. Pankhurst replied:

I am the widow of a barrister, and I lived in perfect harmony and comradeship with my husband. I had an opportunity of learning a good deal more about the administration of the law than the average woman. When I was a very young woman, not long married, and the mother of young children, a very painful thing occurred. The assizes were opened, and the next morning one of the judges of assize did not take his place in court. There were cases being tried at those assizes, cases of wretched men charged with horrible offences against women—

"My lord, I cannot allow you, as a judge, to indicate what is decorum on my part. It must be perfectly obvious to you and to the court that I am not saying these things in any light spirit. After all, you, my lord, and the gentlemen of the jury, are probably going, if I am convicted, to send me to what in all probability will be my death, and I ask you to indulge me."

But the honorable and noble judge, who thought it perfectly proper to criticise and JAIL a woman for demanding her rights, thought it highly improper that the woman in public court should tell the truth about a judge sitting in judgment on women.

"I have not stopped you in inveighing against the laws of this country and the way they are administered, but I do say that you are not to be allowed to go into particular questions."

Mrs. Pankhurst then cited the case of a man who had murdered his wife, and who had been allowed by the judge to accuse his wife of immorality—offering the immorality as an excuse for murdering her. She said:

"Well, my lord, if you will allow me to argue that point with you? I was reading the other day where a man was charged with attempting to murder his wife. He was allowed to plead that his wife was an immoral woman. No evidence was produced to prove it, but he received a very light sentence because that was taken into consideration. Now I put it to you, my lord, that I have a right to tell the jury what led me to stand in this dock today; what experiences made me make the speeches I have made."

It was Mrs. Pankhurst's intention to tell how the dreadful stories of cruelty to women, injustice and white slave brutality told by her husband, a practising lawyer, had made her realize her duty and decide to devote her life to getting justice for women.

But the judge could not tolerate any such shocking thing as alluding to immorality on the part OF A JUDGE. It was all very well to accuse a murdered woman of immorality, and thus enable the murderer to get a light sentence—he being a man. But it would never do to permit a woman in the dock to tell what she had known about one of the judges.

Nevertheless, Mrs. Pankhurst, having a wit somewhat quicker and a will somewhat stronger than that of the judge, DID SAY WHAT SHE HAD TO SAY.

She talked about various other things, until the judge had resumed his normal, drowsy mood, and suddenly she said:

"I have been told that I may not refer to the provocation we have received in the administration of the law, that I may not tell you of a judge of the assize who was found dead in a brothel."

The distinguished and noble judge had done his best, but Mrs. Pankhurst had said what she wanted to say. She had the satisfaction of doing her duty, and of telling a judge on the bench that she protested against a system which made women cringe before a judge of the very type of one "found dead in a brothel."

If the judge had had heart, conscience, sense of justice, or even a sense of humor, he would not have disgraced himself by threatening Mrs. Pankhurst, as he did, with excessive severity, saying:

"I think you have committed and been guilty of a most shameful want of decorum in making that observation. I stopped you before. You have done the very thing that I told you you ought not to do. You are doing yourself no good, allow me to tell you."

Mrs. Pankhurst knew perfectly well that she was doing herself no good in the opinion of the judge. She knew that he would inflict a heavier sentence because she had had the courage to tell him to his face that a judge found dead in a brothel was no man to pass judgment on defenceless, miserable women, brought to the lowest condition by other men, LIKE THAT JUDGE HIMSELF.

Fortunately, Mrs. Pankhurst didn't care. For, as she told the judge quite calmly, she would stay in jail ONLY AS LONG AS SHE CHOSE TO STAY. And they knew very well that she would keep her word, that she would come out of jail alive or dead within the time that she fixed.

What do you think about a woman, delicate, and in feeble health, past the prime of life, fighting almost single-handed against brutality such as is represented by that judge? What do you think of the courage of such a woman, defying the court and the whole judicial system of England, making good her threat by starving herself until the cowards who had put her in jail no longer had the courage to keep her there?

She is a woman worth seeing and hearing. Don't miss the chance to see her and to pay her honor.

She will be remembered when many milk-sops who think themselves important men will be forgotten!

Warring Couples, Think of Your Children!

For Their Sake Let There Be No Divorce—Parents Owe Their Children a Happy Home; to Deny It to Them Is Parental Crime

By DOROTHY DIX

LOOK at this picture, all of you disgruntled husbands and wives. It shows a man and a woman straining at the marriage bond, and threatening to tear it asunder, forgetful and heedless of the little children that are being pushed to the wall and crushed by their fight.

It is a tragic picture. It is a sad and terrible picture, yet it might have been painted from real life in an innumerable number of homes. All of us have seen scenes like this. Perhaps we have even posed for the central figures ourselves, that of the angry husband and wife who are ruthlessly sacrificing their children to their own bitter quarrels.

You know how it is in such households. Love is dead. The husband is disenchanted with his wife, weary to death of her. Perhaps he has a real grievance against her, and she is foolish, and flighty, and extravagant. The woman is disillusioned about her husband, and has arrived at the place where he gets upon her nerves and everything he says and does irritates her. Perhaps she has a real grievance against him. Perhaps he drinks too much at times, or stays out too late, or is inclined to be flirtatious.

Why should two people who have found marriage a failure perpetuate that failure? they ask. Why should two people who make each other miserable by staying together not part and go their separate ways in peace? they ask. Why should they keep up the mockery of a home after its spirit has fled? they ask. Why have they not a right to lead their individual lives? they ask.

And the answer is, the CHILDREN. Always the answer is, the CHILDREN. From their little innocent breasts all the shafts of logic, by which the unhappily married justify divorce, fall back blunted and broken.

Childless couples who repent of a sorry matrimonial bargain may break it if they choose. They jeopardize no other interests than their own, but the man and woman who have children have given hostages to fortune, and they have no right to consider their own happiness first. Their paramount duty is not to themselves, but to the helpless little creatures that they have brought into the world.

The saddest sight in the world is a little orphan child with no father to protect it, no mother to love and cuddle it. The next saddest sight is a half-orphan child, a poor little unfortunate that lacks either a father's guidance or a mother's tenderness. That any man or woman would deliberately thrust this cruel fate upon their own offspring is a crime unspeakable.

Yet the land is full of forlorn little children who have been orphaned by the divorce court and who have no mother, or no father, or two mothers and two fathers, and whose arithmetic and morals are hopelessly muddled, and who wouldn't know whether to respect Father No. 1 or Father No. 2, or its old mother or its new mother, if any one should try to teach it the antiquated command about honoring thy father and thy mother.

It is the children who are the victims of every divorce. They suffer financially when they are deprived of the comforts and advantages that the money their father earns should give them.

They suffer sentimentally if they are deprived of the love and tenderness, the petting and coddling of a mother. Most of all they suffer morally in being deprived of the reverence and respect for their parents that is one of the most potent safeguards against temptation to the young.

To shake a child's faith in the goodness of its parents is to shake its faith in everything that is fine and noble. Yet how can you teach a girl to be pure if it is a matter of public record that her mother was a light woman? How can you teach a boy high ideals if his mother divorced his father for base conduct? It is of these things, and not their own wrongs, that men and women should think before they break the marriage tie.

And it is not alone the husbands and wives who get divorces that wrong their children. Those couples who are continually quarrelling and bickering, who flash out bitter taunts and accusations against each other in their children's presence, are equally blameworthy. They also sacrifice their children on the altar of their tempers.

Not long ago an officer in the Children's Court made the statement that investigation showed that practically every truant child and every juvenile criminal came from a home in which there was domestic trouble. Generally the parents were divorced, or separated, but almost invariably the home was a place of discord.

The inference is inescapable—the children who come from happy homes in which the father and mother get along peaceably together also behave themselves. They are not juvenile criminals, and so, fathers and mothers, if you want your children to grow up into being good men and women you must give them the right sort of a start.

This can only be done in a real home, a home that is full of peace and love and good will, and where there's just one permanent father and one permanent mother, and where the mother teaches the children that the father is the pattern of manhood that they must copy, and the father inculcates into the children's minds that their mother is only a little lower than the angels.

Every child has a right to that kind of environment, and no matter how much a man and woman come to hate each other, for the sake of their children they are in duty bound to keep up the fiction of such a home until the children are grown and their characters are formed.

Look again at this picture, you quarrelling husbands and wives. Cut it out and stick it up on your mirror where you will see it when you shave, or do your hair. Maybe it will make you think of the helpless little ones whose lives you are ruining with your foolish squabbles. Maybe it will make you resolve to give your children a square deal by giving them a happy home.

The Democratic Platform This Year Is One of the Best the Party Has Ever Offered.

But It will Amount to Nothing Unless It Is Lived Up To. In a Personal Communication, the AMERICAN Has Asked Each and Every Democratic Nominee for the Legislature if He Intends to Be Faithful to the Platform of His Party.

The Democratic platform this year is one of the best the party has ever promulgated. It is almost exactly the platform on which Lieutenant-Governor Walsh based his candidacy for the Democratic nomination. Those principles and policies first put forth by Mr. Walsh are evidence that the Democratic candidate for Governor understood the temper and the principles of his party.

Let anybody should doubt his absolute loyalty to this platform, Mr. Walsh himself did an unusual thing. He himself read the platform to the Convention and moved its adoption in a speech in which he solemnly pledged himself to be faithful to every one of the commands of this Democratic decalogue.

But Governor Foss was faithful to the party platform last year. Yet, even his veto power could not shield Massachusetts from a foul blow at the hands of about fifty Democratic members of the Legislature who preferred to take orders from the Railroad Lobby rather than be faithful to their trust and to their party principles.

Is there danger of this treason being repeated? The AMERICAN hopes that there is not. More than a score of these fifty apostates were defeated under exposure by the AMERICAN. A great many of those who have been renominated will be defeated at the polls. Many who have weathered the storm have been so chastened by their severe experience that they are entirely willing to promise downright loyalty to this platform.

The AMERICAN last Sunday published several specific promises from men who have worn the collar, but who, under local conditions, had succeeded in being renominated.

But the people of the Commonwealth, and especially the Democrats, ought to know whether Mr. Walsh will be sufficiently supported in his policies by the men who are on the Democratic ticket with him, and who, if elected, will enact the laws necessary to carry out the Democratic policies. Without loyal support in the Legislature, Mr. Walsh's efforts at improving our conditions, according to the Democratic platform, will be so much wasted energy.

In a communication to every Democratic nominee for the Legislature, the AMERICAN has asked each and every one if he intends to be faithful to the Democratic platform. Much is bound to depend upon the answers, for it is useless and foolish to conduct an elaborate campaign for Governor on a given set of principles while at the same time the corporation lobbyists are corralling the candidates for the Legislature.

A free Governor is helpless before a corporation controlled Legislature.

The Democratic State Committee has done less effective things than would be an attempt to put their candidates for the Legislature on record concerning their party platform. Federal jobs are not so important to the people of Massachusetts as the reforms which the Democratic party solemnly promises to enact, if its candidates are elected.

SELF-ESTEEM

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal Examiner

A YOUNG MAN who prides himself upon his good habits, and who tries to live up to the ideals implanted in his mind by a good mother, is made unhappy by the malice of his enemies. He says:

"The reason I write is, I suffer—not from weapons, but from tongues of my adversaries, who seek only to drag me down to degradation with lies which I cannot understand. My nature is more like a woman's; by that I mean, more refined than a man's nature usually is."

No lies of our enemies can harm us if we pass on in the path of truth and pay no attention, further than a calm denial of misstatements.

We are judged by our lives and actions in the long run, not by the gossip of our detractors.

The only human being I recollect who attained maturity without being lied about and having enemies was a blind idiot.

This young man quoted above quite possibly is too self-centred.

Regards Himself as the Superior of His Companions

He is continually thinking how refined and good he is, and how much better he is than his associates.

This state of mind naturally attracts criticism.

When any one assumes an "I-am-holier-than-thou" attitude toward his fellow men, he is certain to be targed for it.

People resent that attitude more than any other.

Real goodness, real worth, real morality, is always accompanied by a sort of gentle humility; a manner which invites confidence; a deportment which carries with it sympathy and understanding.

Unless you feel near to your fellow men; unless you are conscious of their kinship, no matter how erring they may be; unless your thought is one of pity rather than condemnation for their failure to live as good a life as you are living, then you are not really so good, after all—not really so much better than they, with all their sins.

For you have the sin of self-conceit, of self-satisfaction, of uncharitableness, of lack of human sympathy. And you forget that you have not their inheritance and environment.

The human being who puts on airs for any reason is a pitiable creature.

The very best of mortals is still full of faults.

The very brightest is dull or weak or incomplete, in some respects.

Success of Present Day Pigmies Compared to Ancestors

The most successful in the arts or professions or trades are pigmies, put beside men and women who have lived in other eras.

There is nothing which we can with any reason pride ourselves upon having done or been to the extent of holding our heads above our fellows. Whatever our achievements, we need to feel humility in the presence of THE GREAT ALL-MIGHTY CREATOR OF THE UNIVERSE.

We need to walk softly and speak kindly, and be patient and charitable and sympathetic and helpful; and we need to talk much of the good qualities of others and little of our own.

This young man, quite possibly, brought all his troubles on himself by trying to impress upon his associates how very much more moral and refined and delicate he is than they.

He needs to develop some robust qualities.

He needs to turn his thoughts out toward his fellows, and not in upon his own good self so continually.

We Should Do Good to Those We Know Despise Us

Let him do good to those who despitefully use him, and speak pityingly of those who lie about his, even if he keeps away from their society.

And let him forget all his troubles, which are mainly imaginary.

No lasting or serious harm can come to any one who fills his mind with good thoughts, his mouth with good words, and his life with good actions.
